U. S. ABOUT TO EMBARK ON A 'TVA' IN TEXAS

Expected to Cost 60 to 70 Millions.

BY PHILIP KINSLEY.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Austin, Tex., Sept. 23.—[Special.]—The United States government is about to embark on another expensive adventure in river control, power making, irrigation of new lands, and planning similar to that in the valley of the Tennessee. Texas is the scene.

Private power companies, which have developed twice the capacity needed by the state for a hundred years, are to be put out of business, their stockholders denuded, and an extra burden of taxation laid upon the whole people.

The beginning of all this is found in the action of the Texas lower house in passing the Colorado river authority bill, which was drawn, according to its proponents, at the personal request of President Roosevelt putting the state in the position of getting an immediate 4½ million dollar loan from the PWA and starting on the vast project of rebuilding the valley of the Colorado according to the dreams of those in control in Washington.

[The Colorado river referred to is the river which runs through middle Texas, starting northwest of Colorado, Tex., and emptying into the Gulf of Mexico at Matagorda, Tex. It is not the more famous Colorado river which empties into the Gulf of California.]

Cost 60 to 70 Millions.

Already it is called the CVA, and warning was given in debate on the floor that this was the beginning of a 60 to 70 million dollar expenditure. In addition the legislature is ready to pass a conservation bill for the Brazos valley which would call for 14 dams and more federal money. The whole attitude of the majority of the legislators, who were led by an astute group who knew what they were about, was that there is a big Santa Claus up in Washington and that Texas had better get some of this money while getting is good.

Again and again it was reiterated on the floor that Texas was not spending one red penny for this Colorado river improvement, and it was evident that the legislature did not consider it a profitable venture from any view point of state or common business.

The bonds, it was plainly intimated would not be worth much. No private concern would go into it. State money would not be risked. Even a $5,000 sum to set up an office for the new authority was haggled over, and must be repaired.

Old Policies in New Hands.

But there is more to this situation than this. It presents, according to the minority opposed to the bill, which has yet to see final passage and actual allotment of money, a fine example of old deal policies ruthlessly applied by New Deal advocates here and in Washington. It remained for a slender little woman, Mrs. Sarah T. Hughes, serving her second term from Dallas, to lift the curtain a bit upon the back room manipulations of the New Dealers.

It may be explained here that the shadowy figure in the background of this plan from its inception two years ago is Ralph W. Morrison, utilities man, politician, and multimillionaire of San Antonio.

Through a deal with Eugene V. R. Thayer of Chicago, receiver for the Mississippi Valley Utilities Investment company, one of the old Insull group Morrison came into control of the dam property which is to be completed and extended under this government loan.

All of the money so far expended, with the exception of litigation and propaganda expenses for this loan, has been contributed by the Insull company stockholders.

Insull Receivership to Benefit.

Whatever profit will come out of it will be distributed 51 per cent to Morrison and associates and 49 per cent to the Insull receivership. The Texans were mainly influenced by the argument that Texas was to get something for nothing.

Mrs. Hughes and her little group, who vainly tried to stop the flow of this legislation toward enactment, introducing amendment after amendment to curtail the expenses and tie the hands of the promoters, finally got an amendment through in the evening which made the government loan first lien on the property, to be paid in full before the holders of now worthless shares in the Insull concern get any money.

Slight and girlish, yet strong of voice, earnest in manner, keen in debate, she faced the big room filled

A DANGEROUS GAME TO START

3 Found Slain in New Jersey Bog Massacre

Mount Holly, N. J., Sept. 23.—[Special.]—The bodies of three men whose heads had been blown off by shotgun fire were found in a seldom used lane on the edge of a cranberry bog four miles from New Lisbon, N. J., today.

Described by Ellis Parker, Burlington county's chief of detectives, as the most brutal murder in his experience, the cranberry bog massacre appeared to have been the settlement of a gang feud originating in Easton, Pa., or Philadelphia.

One of the bodies was identified as that of Stanley Zimmer of Easton. The identification was made through a lodge card in his pocket and license for the automobile in which the bodies were found. He had $96 in bills, $71 in ones and the remainder in fives.

"It looked like crap shooting money," Parker said, "but it also indicated that the cause of the murder was not robbery."

Investigate at Easton.

Two men, County Detective Clinton G. Zeller and Corporal Frank Long of the state police detective force, were sent at once to Easton. Their first report was that Zimmer had left his home on Thursday with two men who had police records and had been implicated in hijacking cases in the past.

In Zimmer's pocket was also found what Parker called a "decoy letter." It was signed by James Joyiski of Philadelphia. Police there were asked to hold him for questioning if he could be found.

If the decoy letter had actually led the men to the spot at which they were found, the killers—and there were more than one—selected as lonely a spot as could be found in New Jersey.

12 Gauge Gun Used.

The triple murder had evidently been an ambush. Zimmer had apparently left his car on the left—the driver's side—and received one or more charges of buckshot fired from a 12 gauge gun as he alighted. The two other men had left the car on the right side and each had apparently been shot down in the same manner.

That more than one shotgun had been used was shown by the hammer marks of the nine shells found about the car. There were three different hammer identifications. Each of the victims received one or more loads of shot in the body, but a post mortem examination resulted in only seven pellets being extracted from all three bodies.

After the three men had fallen, each had been shot in the head. Zimmer, about ten feet from the car on the left side, apparently lying face up, had been shot at close range. One of the victims, William Schwar, had been shot in the back of his neck. The other victim, believed to have been Joe Riehl, had been shot from the front, at equally close range.

All the men had many other wounds and their legs above and below the knees were scratched slightly, indicating that they had been dragged a short distance.

An examination of the shells failed to disclose any finger marks.

Found on the floor of the car was a paper tag, a plain white one of small size which bore the number thirteen. It had no other mark.

SEASON'S FIRST REAL WINTRY STORM HITS WEST COAST AREA

San Francisco, Cal., Sept. 23.—(AP)—An icy line extending from Canada into California marked the progress today of the first real wintry storm of the fall season.

Blustery winds reached blizzard-like proportions in Alberta and Saskatchewan, Canada, leaving a foot of snow in Regina, Calgary and Alberta and interrupting threshing and beet harvesting.

Sweeping down across the border, the winds brought snow to Montana, Idaho, Oregon and California.

The storm buried Prospect peak, in Lassen National park, California, under a twelve inch covering of white. Snow also fell on Donner summit and at Lake Tahoe, while rain was reported throughout the northern part of the state and down the coast as far as San Diego.

The central Cascades region of Oregon was enveloped in snow, swirling flakes falling as far south as Crater lake. A fall of three inches blanketed Secesh summit, near Cascade, Idaho. Below freezing temperatures accompanied the Montana snow, but did not prevent two football teams from playing a regulation game at Great Falls last night.

AUTUMN ARRIVES IDEAL.

The autumnal equinox brought ideal weather yesterday. As Old Sol crossed the equator on his trip south at 12:46 p. m. summer ended with the mercury reposing at 64 degrees. A low thermometer reading of 54 at 6 a. m. and a high of 66 at 2 p. m. contributed to the day's mean temperature of 60 degrees, just three degrees below normal. Meteorologist C. A. Donnel predicted even milder weather today, with showers by nightfall.

Liner Laconia Scrapes Sides with a Freighter

New York, Sept. 24.—[Monday.]—(AP)—The Cunard-White Star liner Laconia and the American freighter Pan Royal, Radio Marine corporation was informed at 2:50 a. m. [Chicago daylight time] today, scraped sides off Cape Cod. The Pan Royal was out within two feet of her waterline, but it was emphasized no one was injured. An hour after the accident both ships were still standing by. The Laconia had left Boston, after an Atlantic crossing, and is due this afternoon in New York.

Sacramento, Cal., Sept. 23.—(AP)—Virginia Gates McCafferty, 22, hitchhiking daughter of Dr. Thomas S. Gates, president of the University of Pennsylvania, and her mechanic husband, Dan McCafferty, 26, were critically injured in a head-on automobile collision near Dixon, 26 miles from here on the San Francisco highway, tonight.

Both suffered fractured skulls and other less serious injuries. They were taken to a hospital, where their recovery is in doubt.

Girl, 7, Is Killed.

Marjorie Johnson, 7 years old, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. F. R. Johnson, Sacramento, who was riding in the machine with which the McCafferty car collided, was killed.

Among the other six persons injured was Joe McCafferty, brother of Dan. His injuries were not serious.

The McCaffertys left Salt Lake City with an unidentified motorist Sept. 21 headed for California, where they had expressed a desire to live following their marriage in Moscow, Idaho, and its subsequent revelation in Boise. They intended to spend the night in San Francisco before going to El Centro to make their home.

Found in Boise Sept. 15.

The girl before her marriage had disappeared from a dude ranch near Pinedale, Wyo., and was the subject of a widespread search in which department of justice operatives took part.

The search, which began Aug. 14, ended when she and her bridegroom, former El Centro taxicab driver, were found in Boise Sept. 15.

ALL TO BE WELL IF 'SANTA' QUITS, SAYS HENRY FORD

Washington, Pa., Sept. 23.—(AP)—When everybody goes back to work, Henry Ford said today, everything will be fine.

"Do you think that will be this winter?" he was asked during a brief interview at ceremonies dedicating a memorial to William Holmes McGuffey, early American schoolbook author.

"If Santa Claus goes to bed it will," was the quick answer.

"Who do you mean by Santa Claus? The government?"

"You know dang well what I mean!" said Mr. Ford.

TROOPS READY IN GEORGIA FOR MILL REOPENING

Atlanta, Ga., Sept. 23.—(AP)—Four companies of Georgia National Guardsmen were sent to the mill town of Shannon, in northwest Georgia, today, to be on duty tomorrow for the reopening of the big print cloth mill of the Southern Brighton company. The plant has been closed since the textile strike began.

Reports to National Guard headquarters here said there had been minor disorders among the mill workers there and threats of trouble between two factions in the mill. T. J. Kelly, a vice president of the mill at Shannon, said, on the other hand, that the situation was quiet and the mill town peaceful today.

The Brighton mills normally employ between 1,000 and 1,200 workers.

Meanwhile preparations were under way to withdraw 2,100 National Guardsmen from textile strike posts in several parts of the state, but it was indicated they would be on hand when mills reopen tomorrow.

Back to Looms Today.

Washington, D. C., Sept. 23.—(AP)—Shrieking mill whistles tomorrow will summon back to their looms most of the many thousands who three weeks ago answered the strike call of the United Textile Workers.

Foremost as the walkout ends is the question of whether jobs await those who took leading parts in it, with militant unionists on the alert for any indications of discrimination against their colleagues.

The strike was called off yesterday with a minority of the union's executive council insisting that it continue until the mill owners guarantee that all will be rehired.

Other members of the council argued that discrimination was outlawed by the terms of the settlement, proposed by the Winant presidential mediation board, indorsed by President Roosevelt, and accepted by the union as the basis for ending the walkout.

Under the settlement, a board of three will be named by the chief executive to adjudicate all questions of recognition, collective bargaining, and complaints arising from the recovery act's guarantee that workers may organize as they choose.

Will Report Discrimination.

Mill owners' policy in rehiring strikers would be included, labor leaders asserted, and any discrimination would be reported immediately to the board as soon as it was appointed. Mr. Roosevelt is expected to name it without delay.

The mill owners meanwhile were reticent about their plans in this connection, and in addition continued to withhold any direct rejection or approval of the settlement proposed.

George A. Sloan, president of the Cotton Textile institute, while asserting that any plan proposed by the President would receive the manufacturers' utmost consideration, added that it would be tomorrow at the earliest before the operators could speak their minds.

In isolated mills the local unions voted to prolong the strike until the question and matters of local complaint were settled. This was true in several New England mill towns, and labor quarters here heard that Paterson silk workers had taken similar action.

Other details of the settlement included a labor department and federal trade commission investigation into wages and hours and the economic condition of the industry preliminary to any change, and the creation of a second commission to regulate the "stretch-out."

Labor leaders claimed a significant victory in getting their complaints before impartial bodies for settlement and in the elimination of the NRA as the supervising body for the labor provisions of the various textile codes.

Mill Owners Dispute "Victory."

The mill owners disputed this contention, and one asserted that all the strikers had gained was a "three weeks' vacation without pay."

State troops and the army of private guards which stood watch at the mills throughout the strike began demobilizing soon after the strike end order was issued here. All will not be mustered out for several days, however, as minor disturbances might arise in connection with the mill openings.

The week-end brought the fourteenth death attributable to the strike. Leo Roulette, 18, wounded in the all night battle between troops and strikers at Woonsocket, R. I., ten days ago, succumbed.

Deny Protest; Victory of U.S. Yacht Stands

Newport, R. I., Sept. 23.—[Special.]—T. O. M. Sopwith's protest against the defender Rainbow in yesterday's America's cup race was denied tonight by the race committee of the New York Yacht club.

There were two protests, one over a maneuver before the start, and the other because Rainbow did not respond to the attempted force of a luffing match by the challenger Endeavour. Both were denied because the protest flag on Endeavour was not set properly, and Harold S. Vanderbilt, Rainbow's skipper, was not thus afforded an opportunity to lodge counter complaints.

Late in Setting Flag.

The protest flag clause is clearly set forth. The flag should have been placed in the rigging immediately after the first questioned incident, and then carried across the finish line. It was set some time after the luffing attempt occurred, after the first ten miles of the triangular course had been covered, and the flag was taken in before Endeavour finished.

The decision followed a hearing on board the race committee yacht Wilhelmina. The race committee members are Edmund Lang, chairman; E. Vail Stebbins, and Clinton Makenzie. As a result of the verdict there will be a race tomorrow with the standing two victories each. Four are required to gain or retain the cup.

Sopwith claimed that Rainbow crowded Endeavour before the start, while they were jockying for position. The Endeavour, he said, was forced to bear away to avoid a collision. Many well versed in the rules were convinced, however, that the fouling boat was Endeavour.

Had Right to Luff.

Luffing is heading up into the wind. Under the New York Yacht club rules Endeavour had the right to luff so long as she was in a position where her bow would not have struck Rainbow abaft of her shrouds had they come together.

Sopwith contended she would not have. Rainbow was sailing on her course and had she luffed she probably would have been beaten.

Also in the rules is an added sentence that reads:

"In case of doubt as to the right of the leeward yacht to luff, the windward yacht must respond to the luff and protest if she thinks fit."

That one point appeared against Vanderbilt's tactics.

Cite Three Hour Delay.

In the decision the committee called attention to the fact that Endeavour's protest flag was not displayed until three hours after the first alleged foul and two hours after the second one. It was set forth that under the circumstances, the protest not having been properly made, the committee had no power to entertain it.

This was the first time a controversy had arisen in the international contest since 1895, in the series between the Defender and Lord Dunraven's Valkyrie III., when the British challenger was disqualified.

Sopwith tonight sent the following note to the race committee:

"I acknowledge your letter of this evening. I regret to note that your committee refuses to bear Endeavour's protest of yesterday owing to my not having complied with a very trivial technical formality regarding the time my protest flag was flying.

"Yours truly,

"T. O. M. SOPWITH."

Sopwith also announced he would make no appeal from the decision.

AVIATOR CALLED TO TESTIFY ON KIDNAP RANSOM

Couple Spend Night in Arizona.

Lindbergh Pictures

The first pictures ever published of Isadore Fische, the man from whom Bruno Hauptmann said he got the Lindbergh ransom money, may be found on the back page of this issue.

Winslow, Ariz., Sept. 23.—(AP)—Col. and Mrs. Charles A. Lindbergh, flying eastward from Los Angeles to aid a New York grand jury in its investigation of the case against Bruno Richard Hauptmann, suspected of implication in the kidnap-slaying of their first born, landed here tonight.

They went immediately to a hotel for the night. They had left the Saugus, Cal., airport at 10 a. m., Pacific time, without commenting on the case.

Col. Lindbergh is scheduled to go before the grand jury Wednesday.

Pilot Brings Plane.

Clarence Robey, a transport pilot, flew their monocoupe from Clover field, Santa Monica, where it had been kept since their arrival last Monday from the east, to Saugus. Shortly afterward a small gray sedan, driven by a chauffeur, said to have been in the employ of Will Rogers, the humorist, arrived at Saugus with the Lindberghs.

Mrs. Lindbergh, wearing a brown sports suit, at once got into the cabin. Col. Lindbergh helped the chauffeur place their luggage in the ship and then asked Robey:

"How was it—bumpy?"

"Slightly," said Robey.

"Thanks for bringing the ship over."

Greeted with Smiles.

The couple gave instructions to Winslow airport officials that no one was to be told of their arrival, but many persons were at the field. Lindbergh greeted them with smiles.

Mrs. Lindbergh walked in front of their small plane and aided her husband in rolling it into the hangars.

Airport attendants said they were requested to have the Lindbergh plane serviced for a continuation of the journey early tomorrow.

JURY CONVENES TODAY

BY WILLARD EDWARDS.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Sept. 23.—[Special.]—A grand jury tomorrow morning will begin the consideration of evidence against Bruno Richard Hauptmann, former German army machine gunner and journeyman carpenter, who is accused of cashing in on the kidnaping of the infant son of Col. Charles A. Lindbergh.

An ironclad case will be outlined against Hauptmann, according to District Attorney Samuel J. Foley, who will ask the jurors to indict the 34 year old alien on a charge of extortion.

So confident were the authorities that their case against Hauptmann is complete that they have ceased questioning him. He was allowed to brood in his cell throughout the day, a morose figure who is being watched carefully by several guards. His belt and tie have been taken from him lest he attempt suicide.

Hint at New Evidence.

There was a hint in the assurance of the prosecutor that more evidence than has been made public has been garnered by the investigators to indicate that Hauptmann is the man who collected $50,000 from Dr. John F. Condon, Lindbergh's agent, on April 2, 1932. And the public evidence is certainly almost overwhelming.

With Col. Lindbergh and his wife, Anne Morrow Lindbergh, flying here to testify before the grand jury, there is the possibility of a tense and dramatic moment if the famous aviator should face the man charged with perpetrating a cruel hoax upon him. When the ransom was paid the Lindbergh baby was already dead.

If the colonel wishes, he undoubtedly will be given an opportunity to confront Hauptmann. The well known hatred of the flyer for the airing of his personal affairs in public may cause him to avoid a meeting, which would undoubtedly be attended with much publicity, it was pointed out.

New Jersey Would Try Him.

From New Jersey tonight came the first definite statement that Hauptmann will also be prosecuted for the kidnaping and murder itself. After a day of varying reports, Col. H. Norman Schwarzkopf, superintendent of the New Jersey state police, stated flatly that enough evidence has been gathered to warant the extradition of Hauptmann from New York for trial on a charge of kidnaping.

No decision has yet been reached, he said, as to how soon New Jersey will act to extradite the suspect.

"We have enough evidence to bring him back, and we want him," he declared.

The first witness before the grand jury tomorrow is expected to be Dr. John F. Condon, the elderly retired school teacher who, in the rôle of intermediary, handed over $50,000 to a mysterious "John" who had convinced him that he was an agent of the kidnapers. Dr. Condon viewed Hauptmann and said he resembled the recipient of the ransom but he was unable to make a positive identification.

Taxi Driver to Testify.

There is a witness, however, to swear positively to Hauptmann's identity as negotiator for the kidnapers. He is John Perrone, a taxicab driver, who says Hauptman was the man who gave him a dollar to deliver a ransom note to Dr. Condon.

Other witnesses will be Walter Lyle and John Lyons, employés of the gasoline station where the suspect passed the $10 gold certificate which led to his capture. Police officials who discovered the cache of $13,750 in ransom money in Hauptmann's garage will also tell their story.

It will remain only for Col. Lindbergh, who may testify Tuesday or Wednesday, to tell of the kidnaping of the ransom note left in the nursery, of the future extortion notes all penned in the same handwriting, and of the hopes they aroused which were blasted by the discovery May 12, 1932, of the child's body in a thicket about five miles from home.

Will Tell of Ransom.

He will tell also, it is presumed, of his giving the $50,000 ransom to Dr. Condon. And the prosecutor may bring out, for the benefit of the jurors, the fact that Col. Lindbergh insisted that the mysterious recipient of the ransom note be trailed for fear that harm might come to the baby.

Hauptmann, who is being held without bail on an affidavit charging suspicion of extortion, is scheduled to appear before Magistrate Richard F. McKiniry tomorrow morning. The district attorney will urge that the suspect be held pending the conclusion of the grand jury's investigation. James M. Fawcett, Brooklyn lawyer, who has been retained on Hauptmann's behalf, would not state what his plans would be in court.

In an attempt to save her husband, Mrs. Anna Hauptmann, wife of the accused man, declared that she could furnish an alibi for him on the night of the kidnaping. She said Hauptmann called for her every Tuesday and Friday during 1932 because she worked late as a waitress in a restaurant on those nights. March 1, 1932, when the baby was stolen, was on a Tuesday.

Smiles at Alibi Story.

District Attorney Foley only smiled when informed of this alibi.

Hauptmann's defense that the ransom money found in his garage was given him by a friend, Isidor Fische, has been completely disproven, the prosecutor declared. A young woman, whose name was not disclosed, has given testimony exploding this theory, he said. This mystery witness, unofficially described as an attractive blonde, is reported to have accompanied Hauptmann on shopping excursions and drinking parties at which he spent the ransom money freely.

Two other persons today denied the truth of Hauptmann's story. According to cabled reports from Leipzig, where Fische died last March, Pincus Fische, his brother, declared that Fische borrowed the money from Hauptmann to return to his homeland to die. Henry Uhlig, close friend of Fische, also stated that Fische was penniless and that Hauptmann lent money to Fischer rather than the reverse.

716 Ransom Bills Found.

It became known today that 716 of the ransom bills have been recovered. Most of them were found in Manhattan, the Bronx, and Westchester, but a few, it was learned, were picked up in Albany and Cooperstown, N. Y., about the time that Hauptmann passed through those towns on his way to and from a hunting trip in Maine. Fifteen of the bills were bloodstained, leading to a theory that the extortionists may have had a bloody battle over the profits of their crime.

In the belief that Hauptmann may have more ransom money secreted about his home, detectives were busy today searching the cellar of his house. His landlady, Mrs. Pauline Rauch, declared that her tenant had violently objected to admitting a salesman for an oil burner company to the basement of the modest little wood and stucco house.

Market Account Checked.

Considerable mystery remained concerning Hauptmann's stock market transactions, which he began shortly after the ransom money was paid. His operations were reported to have totaled more than $264,000 in one year. This, of course, merely indicated an extremely active account and gives no idea of its actual size. An assistant district attorney said Hauptmann had told him he still had a credit balance of $4,500 with the brokerage firm Steiner Rouse & Co.

It was reported and not denied by officials that Hauptmann opened the account in April, about ten days after payment of the ransom, with an initial deposit of $10,000 in his wife's maiden name. For a time, it was said, his transactions showed a profit, but by the end of 1933 he was in the red. The accounts are being audited for the district attorney.

Summary of Evidence.

The actual proof that can be presented to a jury against Hauptmann stands somewhat as follows:

1. He wrote all 14 notes which figured in the kidnaping and ransom, including the one left on the window sill of the Lindbergh home in Hopewell, N. J., the night of the kidnaping. Handwriting experts are prepared to swear positively to this.

2. He had the opportunity and the skill to construct the kidnap ladder which was built of lumber from a lumber yard where Hauptmann worked shortly before the kidnaping.

3. He was in possession of $13,750 of the ransom money, 30 months after the kidnaping.

4. He began playing the stock market with suddenly acquired funds a week after the ransom money was paid. Previously he had been a poor man, a carpenter infrequently employed.

5. He answers the description of the man who collected the ransom from Dr. Condon, although there has been no positive identification to this effect.

There are other compromising details, such as the story of the Ohio penitentiary convict that he received a letter in code early in 1932 signed "Bruno Hauptmann" which announced a determination to kidnap the Lindbergh baby.

Why Murder Case Is Delayed.

Taking this summary of the evidence, it is apparent why the authorities have decided to proceed on the extortion charge and take their time about the kidnaping and murder accusation. The fact that Hauptmann wrote the ransom notes and even the first note left on the window sill does not prove he actually participated in the kidnaping. Nor does his construction of the kidnap ladder, if admitted, proved that he climbed the ladder and took the child.

If the defense could knock out the expert testimony that Hauptmann wrote the letter left on the window sill, lawyers point out, it might easily be contended that Hauptmann merely took advantage of Dr. Condon and collected a ransom without any knowledge of the whereabouts of the child or the identity of the real kidnapers.

Aware of these flaws in a kidnaping and murder case against the prisoner, the federal agents are untiring in their efforts to disclose further evidence, to identify Hauptmann as having been seen in the vicinity of the Lindbergh home, or to acquire other testimony putting him on the scene of the crime.

Expect New Disclosures by Convict "Pal" of Hauptmann

[Copyright: 1934: By the Associated Press.]

Columbus, O., Sept. 23.—(AP)—Tight-lipped secrecy today shielded certain disclosures by George M. Paulin, 27 year old Ohio penitentiary prisoner, who contends he had prior knowledge of a plot by Bruno Hauptmann to kidnap Charles Augustus Lindbergh Jr.

Warden Preston E. Thomas, a confidant of the young robber who declares he used to "shill" for Hauptmann in the pickpocket racket, stated there are other details of Paulin's story that dovetail into the career of the German ex-convict and woodworker which the warden is withholding from publication.

"You don't want to print anything that would thwart justice," the veteran warden told The Associated Press today. "There are facts we are keeping secret."

Refuses Any Information.

"Do these relate to other persons and addresses Paulin says he knows in connection with Hauptmann?" the warden was asked.

"A Chinaman never gets into trouble," the warden grinned, "because he never talks. We have told our story. It remains now to see what is done about it."

He added, however, that department of justice operatives have possession of all important details of Paulin's story which included the declaration that he received a code note from Hauptmann weeks before baby Lindbergh was stolen from his nursery crib.

The receipt of that note, which Paulin said was signed "Bruno," was followed by a secret trip to New Jersey where the prisoner said he tried vainly to have both Col. Charles A. Lindbergh and New Jersey authorities permit him to work out his own plan of contacting Hauptmann.

Won't Work with Jersey.

Paulin, in a second interview today, said he is unwilling to offer any help to New Jersey authorities but would be willing to "go along" with federal agents.

He reiterated his willingness to go to New York and accuse Hauptmann face to face.

"He is the man," Paulin asserted.

The warden said he knew the name of the family with which Paulin said he and Hauptmann had associated but added, "We better not use it right now because the department of justice has this name and it may lead to other startling developments in the case."

Paulin said today he had expected to receive some money from Hauptmann but declared it would not have been ransom money and that he had nothing whatever to do with the kidnap plot although, before he was sent to the Ohio penitentiary for robbery, he said Hauptmann once remarked that Col. Lindbergh would be a good subject for a "big touch."

REPORTS FISCHE BORROWED FARE TO SAIL ABROAD

Brother Says Hauptmann Made Loan.

LEIPZIG, Germany, Sept. 23.—(AP)—A brother of Isadore Fische, the man from whom Bruno Richard Hauptmann said he got the Lindbergh ransom money, said today Isadore returned to Germany on money he borrowed from Hauptmann and died with scores of bills unpaid.

Paul Fische, the brother, said Isadore's sole cash assets when he died on March 29, 1934, consisted of a traveler's check for 100 marks. He added that Isadore died of tuberculosis.

Paul also revealed that Isadore, only shortly before his death, told him he had borrowed money from Hauptmann to make the trip.

"Knew He Would Die."

"We didn't know Isi [the German spelling is Isidor] was so sick," said Frau Paul Fische, deeply moved. "He came over to cure an ailment, but was completed wretched upon his arrival. Obviously, he knew he would die and wanted to see us once more."

Her husband added they figured Isadore started from America for Germany with $1,000 which he used in paying for a ticket to Leipzig and back, and to pay his doctor bills.

Paul, an older brother, said he remembered Isadore telling him he became acquainted with Hauptmann in New York about 18 months ago.

"Isadore mentioned Hauptmann as a kind of business associate," Paul said. He intimated that Hauptmann was described by his brother in frequent references as a man dealing in "everything."

Long Fur Traders.

"Our family always have been honest fur traders, making a reasonable living, but have not gathered fortunes," was the comment of Frau Fische in answer to a frank inquiry concerning the trend of their business.

"Isadore was severely handicapped by illness, often finding himself without a job," Paul Fische said. "The minute Isadore's death became known to his former friends heaps of letters descended upon us from persons in America and Germany demanding repayment of debts which Isadore supposedly had incurred while in New York."

Fische emphatically rejected the mere thought that Isadore could have lent Hauptmann any money.

THREATENS TO KIDNAP CANADA PACKER; ASKS RANSOM OF $4,000,000

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Ont., Sept. 23.—A threat to kidnap Sir Joseph Flavelle, Canadian packer, financier, and baronet, and to hold him for $4,000,000 ransom features a letter mailed from Toronto to Norman F. Newton, acting crown attorney at London. A person who signs himself a "Four-X Spike" is author of the note. He has sent two previous letters to Newton commanding him to drop a campaign against an alleged blackmail ring.

Under the heading "Death Notice" Newton was told he is "on the spot" and that his children, Ross and Derek, schoolboys, are to be kidnaped and held for ransom. The children, the notice said, will be buried over the Niagara gorge if the ransom is not paid. Premier Mitchell F. Hepburn and A. W. Roebuck, attorney general, are also threatened with kidnaping in the new note.

Police declare the author is connected with a blackmail ring. Five men, held on extortion charges, will be given preliminary hearings next Tuesday.

Vyvyan French Drury, Earl's Grandchild, Seeks Divorce

[Copyright: 1934: By the New York Times.]

LONDON, Sept. 23.—According to the Daily Express Mrs. Vyvyan Drury, beautiful granddaughter of the late earl of Ypres, is seeking a divorce. The case, which appears on the undefended list, is down for hearing during the Michaelmas term, Oct. 2. Before marriage Mrs. Drury was Miss Essex French. Her sister, Lady Brougham, formerly Miss Valerie French, was granted a decree a few months ago. The Drurys managed to have a secret wedding at St. George's, Hanover Square, in 1929. They have one daughter.

2 on Way to Dance Killed in Auto Crash; 2 Injured

Ladd, Ill., Sept. 23.—[Special.]—When the automobile in which they were en route going to a dance collided head-on with another machine north of this village at 9:30 p. m. tonight, Leonard Elberger, 23, and Aldo Rocco, 22, of Cherry suffered fatal injuries. Stanley Katkus, driver of the ill-fated auto, and William Dudak of Ladd, at the wheel of the other machine, were seriously injured. Two others, Earl Hohcheid and Armondo Ugodni, riding in the Katkus machine, were unhurt.

DEATH LIST OF JAPAN'S TYPHOON ABOVE 2,000 MARK

TOKIO, Sept. 23.—(AP)—The death list in last week's typhoon passed the 2,000 mark today with the finding of additional corpses in ruined buildings at Osaka. Compilations in the office of the home ministry tonight showed: Dead, 2,064; injured, 13,335; missing, 258; buildings destroyed, 32,939.

Home Minister Fumio Goto left for Osaka today to investigate conditions on behalf of the Japanese cabinet. Reconstruction work already has begun. Huge quantities of building materials have been laid down at Osaka.

American Ambassador and Mrs. Joseph Clark Grew, who sailed on a steamer the day before the typhoon, arrived in Dairen today. Their vessel passed through the fringe of the typhoon and was not damaged.

Couple Starts for Home After Kidnap Experience

Oakland, Cal., Sept. 23.—(AP)—Mr. and Mrs. R. O. Stratton, Glendale couple who were kidnaped and forced to come to Oakland in their automobile with the kidnaper, started home today. "I hope it never happens again, but after all it was an adventure," said Mrs. Stratton. Police said they were convinced the man with seven pistols and a rifle who released the Strattons yesterday with a warning not to report to authorities was John Baldwin, wanted for a Salt Lake City holdup.

SON GUILTLESS OF SLAYING, SAYS MRS. PIERPONT

She Quotes Dillinger in Visit to Death Row.

[Copyright: 1934: By the Associated Press.]

Columbus, O., Sept. 23.—(AP)—Harry Pierpont's mother today declared John Dillinger told her it was Homer Van Meter and not her son who slew Sherif Jess Sarber of Lima, O.

After a visit to Ohio penitentiary's death row, where her son lies wounded after his futile attempt to break jail yesterday, the mother, Mrs. Lena Pierpont, gave the Ohio State Journal a statement of a conversation she said she had with Dillinger in Chicago when search for the desperatdo was at its height. This, she said, was two weeks before Dillinger was killed.

"I Know He's Not Guilty."

"I'm sorry to see my son suffer for something he did not do," she said. "I know Harry wasn't guilty of killing Sherif Sarber. He was home at the time that happened."

Mrs. Pierpont declared she asked Dillinger to tell who delivered him from jail last Oct. 12 when the sherif was slain. His reply, she said, was this:

"Yes, Mrs. Pierpont, if I'm ever taken alive, I'll surely tell who did it. Homer Van Meter is the man who fired the shot that killed Sherif Sarber, and Tommy Carroll and—[Mrs. Pierpont named a third man]—are the men who were in the Lima jail and turned me out."

Pierpont Refuses Food.

Pierpont, sardonic and hard boiled, with Charles Makley, also under death sentence for the slaying of the sherif, whipped out a "revolver" molded from soap and made a desperate try for freedom yesterday.

Makley was fatally wounded by the emergency guard squad.

Pierpont refused food today, but Dr. George W. Keil, prison physician, said it is likely he will live.

LIST ARTICLES SEIZED AT HOME OF HAUPTMANN

New York, Sept. 23.—(AP)—In the Bronx district attorney's office tonight reposed a curious collection of articles taken from the stucco home of Bruno Richard Hauptmann.

District Attorney Samuel Foley didn't explain why some of the possessions were taken, but without comment gave out is list:

Two pairs of field glasses, one of German make and very powerful.

One empty pasteboard box bearing he name "Jacobson's, Fordham road."

One gray topcoat.

One black overcoat.

One large steamer trunk.

One small brown traveling bag.

One 12 gauge automatic shotgun of German make.

One midget cedar chest of inlaid wood.

One new strong box.

One gray felt hat.

One empty cigar box.

NEW EXPLOSIONS PERIL RESCUERS IN WELSH MINE

261 Dead in Pit; Shaft Ordered Sealed.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

WREXHAM, Wales, Sept. 23.—After rescue squads had battled for forty hours against gas and flames in the Gresford mine near Wrexham following yesterday's explosion, all rescue operations were abandoned tonight. The rescue squads were brought to the surface and the shaft was sealed.

It was announced that 261 miners had lost their lives. Only sixteen bodies have been recovered and these were brought to the surface yesterday.

Gas Spreads in Mine.

The decision to abandon rescue work was reached after a series of new explosions. Heavy accumulations of carbon monoxide also menaced the lives of the rescuers.

Out of five men of the first rescue party to go down, only two returned. One of them was Jack Williams, who was rescued by Price Beard, leader of the party. After Williams fell Beard tore off his shirt and placed it over the victim's head. Then he dragged the unconscious man to safety.

The last men to leave the mine were Sir Henry Walker, the government's chief inspector of mines, and John McGurk, president of the Lancashire and Cheshire Miners' federation. During their visit, which lasted seven hours, three new explosions occurred where the rescuers were working.

New Outbreak of Fire.

Every device known to the science of mining was tried in an attempt to overcome the fire in the main road," mine officials said. "While these efforts were partly successful, there was a new outbreak of fire in the road to the right, through which it had been hoped to reach any survivors. When it was found that the air in the main returns was carrying a dangerous quantity of carbon monoxide officials decided it would be futile to risk the rescuers' lives."

A relief fund has been started for survivors and the families of dead miners. About $40,000 has been contributed.

Advertising Man Dies in Chrysler Bldg. Leap

New York, Sept. 23.—(AP)—Jerome H. Faulkner, 31, advertising copy writer, plunged to his death today from an eighth story window of the Chrysler building. Faulkner, a former newspaper reporter in San Francisco, had been in ill health recently.

BANKER SEIZED BY U. S. AFTER HIS SUICIDE ATTEMPT

George Gray, 42 years old, assistant manager of the Maywood, N. J., branch of the People's Trust and Guaranty company was taken into custody by agents of the department of justice at the county hospital Saturday night, it was disclosed yesterday.

Following receipt of a government memorandum Gray was removed from the county hospital to the Bridewell hospital, but mystery still surrounded the entire affair.

Gray had attempted suicide Thursday by inhaling gas in his room at the Cambridge hotel, 530 Diversey parkway. Capt. James Novak, assistant warden at the Bridewell, said that the government memorandum indicated the charge of embezzlement, although no formal charge has been filed against Gray. Police in Maywood said a shortage of $7,001.25 had been found in a federal reserve shipment to the People's Trust and Guaranty company branch, of which Gray was assistant manager.

When questioned about the motive for trying to end his life, Gray merely said he was "despondent over everything generally."

H. A. Herzog, chief of police of the New Jersey town, requested Chicago police to find Gray on Aug. 2. He arrived here on the Pennsylvania railroad Aug. 3, police learned, after a plane which he had boarded for Chicago was forced down the previous night in Pennsylvania. No trace was found of him here until his suicide attempt.

GERMAN PASTORS ACCUSE HITLER'S BISHOP OF HERESY

Mueller Proclaimed Supreme Head of Church.

BY SIGRID SCHULTZ.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BERLIN, Sept. 23.—While Reichsbishop Ludwig Mueller was being consecrated as the supreme head of the German Protestant church today, hundreds of opposition pastors bitterly denounced him from their pulpits.

The assault against the Nazi bishop was led by the Rev. Martin Niemoeller, militant leader of the Pastors' Emergency league and wartime submarine commander.

Mueller and Dr. August Jaeger, commissioner of Protestant churches in Prussia, were accused of "heresy" in a declaration which was read to thousands of church goers.

Claim They Forfeited Rights.

"Bishop Mueller, Dr. Jaeger, and their followers have divorced themselves from the Christian community, abandoned the bases of the Christian church, and have forfeited all rights thereto," the statement said.

"They are guilty of heresy in that by setting aside the confession of faith they seek to establish a German national church with Germanic faith characteristics."

The opposition declaration regarded the consecration of Bishop Mueller as "the concluding act of a development which must fill all Christians with the deepest shame and sorrow."

The ringing denunciations of Nazi religious policies were delivered before throngs of worshipers. Many persons were unable to gain admittance to St. Anne's church in Dahlem, a suburb of Berlin, to hear the Rev. Mr. Niemoeller.

On the other hand less than 5,000 were gathered in front of the Berlin Protestant cathedral during the consecration of Bishop Mueller. The bishop's followers had predicted that an audience of 60,000 Nazi German Christians would assemble outside the cathedral to participate in the elaborate ceremony.

Important Bishops Absent.

Conspicuous by their absence were two of the most important bishops in Germany—Bishop Theophil Wurm of Wuerttemberg and Bishop Hans Meiser of Bavaria. Wurm has been ousted by Mueller over the protest of his congregation for opposing the Nazi church regime. Meiser's position is considered precarious for the same reason.

Only one foreign church dignitary was in the audience. He was the bishop of the Russian church in Berlin. Minister of the Interior Wilhelm Frick and Dr. Hjalmar Schacht, economic dictator, were the only members of the government present.

Hundreds of clergymen and 29 bishops preceded Reichsbishop Mueller into the cathedral in a solemn procession. The congregation rose and gave the Hitler salute. Outside the crowd greeted the dignitaries with shouts of "Heil Hitler!"

The black and brown uniforms of Hitler Guards and Storm Troopers were predominant. Nazi flags and emblems were carried into the cathedral by brown shirted Storm Troopers. The galleries were draped with swastika banners.

Mueller Gives Brief Address.

Mueller, a former world war chaplain, gave a brief address. He avoided any mention of Chancellor Hitler's name and his utterances were strictly along the lines of orthodox Protestantism.

"We have but one function," he said, "namely proclaiming God's words, the gospel of Jesus, and his power in Heaven and upon earth.

"The church exists in this perishable world, upon this earth, in this state and among this people. It is our state and our people. We would like to serve this state and this people willingly with all our strength and our entire devoted love."

Mueller assumed office by standing before the altar and pledging himself to fulfil the duties of reichsbishop in accordance with the holy writ and Martin Luther's teachings.

The bishops then stepped forward to greet Mueller. Some shook his hand. Others raised their arms in stiff Nazi salutes. Mueller returned the salutes.

Bishop Defies Secret Police.

ANSBACH, Germany, Sept. 23.—(AP)—Bishop Hans Meisser of Bavaria defied secret police today by preaching a sermon in which he voiced strong opposition to the policies of Reichsbishop Ludwig Mueller. Police had ordered the bishop not to touch the controversial subject.

A congregation of 3,000 filled St. John's church where Meisser delivered his sermon. He denounced German Christians and warned his hearers they must "expect to be severely tried for their faith."

Another thousand attended an overflow service later. Hundreds arrived by train from Wuerttemberg towns, where references to anything against the Mueller church régime are strictly banned. Meisser was given an ovation by the congregation.

Pastor Assails Church's Backing of 'New Dealism'

BY THORNTON SMITH.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Milwaukee, Wis., Sept. 23.—[Special.]—The Rev. Dr. William Forney Hovis, pastor of the Kenwood Methodist Episcopal church, today vigorously attacked the position of anti-capitalism and "new dealism" of the Methodist social commission, which, in a modified form, was adopted this month at the Methodist Episcopal conference in Appleton, Wis. Dr. Hovis fought the report in the conference, but it was amended and adopted by a close division during his absence.

A loyal churchman, Dr. Hovis today declared his right to think for himself on matters in which conscientious men may disagree, regardless of church pronouncement.

"Jesus had no nostrums in the form of alphabetical bureaus," he said.

Defines His Opposition.

Dr. Hovis preached at the Whitefish Bay Community church, defining the attitude of the service commission and his position in opposition to it.

He characterized as folly modern talk about "breakdown of the present social order" and the assumption that a "new deal" is a panacea for all social, economic, and industrial ills.

"Jesus was not a Socialist as the modern world knows socialism," he said. "He was the sponsor of no social, economic, or political reforms.

"Christ did not decry the profit motive as if it were all wrong. He praised the men who increased the talents that had been given them.

Compares Two Systems.

"Jesus was an individualist. He appears to teach that the unity will be right when the units are right A communistic régime where the individual loses his freedom and opportunity of self-governm ent and becomes an indistinguishable member of a social mass was never in His thought."

Dr. Hovis thus compares the sharing of the communistic system of soviet Russia and the capitalistic system of America, which, he said, it is now so fashionable to attack:

"The first represents an enforced cooperation in which the rewards of abilities of every kind are shared alike by the idle, the thrifty, the spender, the capable, the incapable, the strong, the weak, the virtuous, and the wicked," he said. "The second is a voluntary sharing, giving the freest play to altruistic and ethical virtues. Which is the more Christian? It ought not to be difficult to decide."

Continuing, he declared that all planned economy is destructive of human freedom.

"Individual Suppressed."

"The individual is suppressed in favor of the state," he asserted.

"The genuine American believes in liberty because he is free born. He will not suffer himself to be pressed into a mould by any exterior compulsion. It is only a question of time till planned economy and regimentation of crops and herds will not be tolerated by a liberty loving people.

"It is a matter of grave concern that American youth in its spirit of adventure and daring has been so greatly duped into the belief that the delusive 'coöperative commonwealth' is a thing to be desired.

"What I am trying to say is that the capitalistic system basically is not un-Christian. What it needs is purging and reformation—not supplanting."

ENVOY OF POPE SAILS TODAY FOR EUCHARISTIC RITE

ROME, Sept. 22.—(AP)—Cardinal Pacelli, the pope's legate to the Eucharistic congress at Buenos Aires beginning Oct. 10, left Rome tonight by train for Genoa, where tomorrow he will board the Conte Grande, en route to South America.

In Buenos Aires Cardinal Pacelli will preside over the chief ceremonies of the congress, assisted by Archbishop Santiago Copello of Buenos Aires and other South American prelates. He was accompanied today by a papal mission of six.

Two More Locals Join Purse Workers' Strike

New York, Sept. 23.—(AP)—The International Pocketbook Workers union, representing 5,000 striking members in New York, announced tonight that its locals in Stroudsburg, Pa., and Jersey City, N. J., would join the walkout tomorrow morning. The New York local has been on strike since last Thursday. Union headquarters claimed 400 workers in a Holyoke, Mass., factory had walked out Saturday.

HIGHEST COURT SHOWDOWN IS NEAR ON CODES

Lower U. S. Tribunals Are Divided.

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.

Washington, D. C., Sept. 23.—[Special.]—The Supreme court is yet to pass on the first case growing out of federal laws enacted under the Roosevelt recovery program.

During the last term that court decided numerous recovery cases, but all of them arose from state, not federal, legislation dealing with the depression. Though the decisions were closely scrutinized for clews to the probable attitude of the court on the New Deal, the clash of legal arms was merely the skirmishing before the real battle over the recovery acts of congress which will begin when the court reassembles next week.

Altogether there are nearly 200 New Deal cases in the lower federal courts. Of these 76 have been decided in those courts. Many of them either have reached or are about to reach the Supreme court. The government won 60 and lost 16 of these cases in the lower courts.

Lower Courts Sharply Divided.

A sharp division of opinion on the constitutionality of the New Deal legislation has been recorded in the decisions of the lower courts. The NIRA was based by congress in part upon the power of the central government under the constitution to regulate commerce between the states. A federal district judge in Texas held, however, that the NIRA is unconstitutional when applied to the owners of a filling station selling gasoline within a state for consumption within the state. On the other hand, a district court in Michigan restrained a filling station from violating the petroleum code. But the federal court in Chicago refused to enjoin a similar corporation in similar circumstances.

A federal district judge in New York ruled that a court has no authority to say that price fixing is not a reasonable means for overcoming obstacles to interstate commerce.

In the eastern district of Texas a federal court sustained, without an opinion, the argument that the petroleum code fixing quotas of production transcends the interstate commerce clause and is therefore unconstitutional.

Hits Coal Mining Code.

Judge Dawson in the Western Kentucky district held NIRA unconstitutional as applied to coal mining. He said he knew of "no higher duty of the national courts than to strike down such unwarranted invasions of the reserved powers of the states and the rights of the people."

The Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals dismissed a petition for an injunction to restrain the government from enforcement of the oil code. The court held that the legislation involves no unconstitutional delegation of powers to the President. "While congress," said the court, "cannot abdicate legislative power, it may make a large delegation of it, always retaining the right of control and of resumption."

The Frazier-Lemke farm mortgage moratorium act was held unconstitutional by District Judge Chesnut of Baltimore on the ground that it tends to confiscate the property of creditors in violation of the constitutional prohibition to take property without due process of law.

Judge Chesnut said it doubles the protection of debtors and impairs the protection of creditors.

Numerous cases involving construction of the collective bargaining provision of Section 7A of NIRA are on the way to the high court. The Weirton Steel company case, which the government lost in the lower court, has attracted much attention because the department of justice contended in its brief that persons and corporations consenting to a code or enjoying the benefits of a code are estopped from asserting the unconstitutionality of that code.

While the codes were being framed the President and Brig. Gen. Hugh S. Johnson, chief of the NIRA, contended that a person could not waive his constitutional rights. Stipulations of nonwaiver of constitutional rights were stricken out of all codes containing them when submitted except the chemical and newspaper publishing codes. If the subsequent contention of the department of justice in the Weirton case be upheld by the Supreme court millions of business men will find that the administration euchred them out of their constitutional rights.

Insist on Freedom Pledge.

The newspaper publishers insisted upon the retention in their code of Article VII., which provides:

"Those submitting this code recognize that pursuant to Section 10 [b] of the act the President may, from time to time, cancel or modify any order approving this code, but in submitting or subscribing to this code the publishers do not thereby consent to any modification thereof, except as each may thereto subsequently agree, nor do they thereby waive any constitutional rights or consent to the imposition of any requirements that might restrict or interfere with the constitutional guarantee of the freedom of the press."

When the President signed the code he not only called this article superfluous but nullified the proviso respecting subsequent modification of the code. In his executive order he said:

"In so far as Article VII. is not required by the act, it is pure surplusage. While it has no meaning, it was permitted to stand merely because it has been requested and because it could have no such legal effect as would bar its inclusion. Of course, a man does not consent to what he does not consent to. But if the President should find it necessary to modify this code the circumstances that the modification was not consented to would not affect whatever obligations the nonconsentor would have under Section 3 [d] of the National Industrial Recovery act.

"Of course, also, nobody waives any constitutional rights by assenting to a code. The recitation of the freedom of the press clause in the code has no more place here than would the recitation of the whole constitution or the Ten Commandments. The freedom guaranteed by the constitution is freedom of expression, and that will be scrupulously respected—but it is not freedom to work children, or do business in a firetrap or violate the laws against obscenity, libel, and lewdness."

With Article VII. thus nullified by the President's executive order, the publishers flatly declined to accept the code. Seven days later the President retreated and signed a new executive order declaring that notwithstanding his previous order Article VII. is "approved as submitted and without modification, condition or qualification."

With this withdrawal of the President's nullification of Article VII. the publishers accepted the code.

Roosevelt Says Neither Yes Nor No on Johnson Ouster

Hyde Park, N. Y., Sept. 23.—[Special.]—The same silence with which President Roosevelt is withholding his relief and "social security" plans from the public until after the congressional elections applied today to reports from Washington that Gen. Hugh S. Johnson is through as NRA administrator.

Marvin H. McIntyre, White House secretary, said the President refused to comment, either in affirmation or denial, on published reports that Johnson's connection with the NRA has been severed. The impression here, however, is that the reports from Washington are true, that his intemperate outburst in New York City a week ago was in effect a resignation. The President has never affirmed or denied reports that Johnson actually handed in his resignation in Washington five weeks ago, after Donald R. Richberg and Frances Perkins, secretary of labor, sought to clip the wings of the Blue Eagle boss.

Through as Dictator.

But the President has made it clear that Johnson is through as the NRA dictator and that the affairs of that organization are to be conducted by three separate divisions, legislative, judicial and executive, each with its own personnel. At that time it was indicated Johnson would remain, probably in the capacity of chairman of the executive board. Then Johnson's attack on organized labor was delivered during the negotiations of the President's special board to settle the textile strike.

White House spokesmen denied that a conference between President Roosevelt and Gerard Swope, chairman of the board of the General Electric company and long a power in the NRA, which is scheduled for tomorrow, has anything to do with the Johnson question. They said it was merely a continuation of the long series of conferences the President is conducting with financial and industrial leaders preparatory to framing legislation for the next session of congress.

Probably less embarrassing but far more important than the Johnson issue on the President's program is the relief question, which is inseparably coupled up with national finance.

Confers with Hopkins.

Yesterday he conferred with Harry Hopkins, relief administrator; Bernard M. Baruch, financial adviser, and a delegation of mayors advocating a permanent federal relief fund and unemployment insurance. This subject may be considered with Mr. Swope tomorrow.

Mr. Roosevelt has declined to give even the outlines of his relief plans, jokingly evading questions with answers that he will submit them to congress in his annual and budgetary messages. Actually, it is stated by those in a position to know, he is waiting until the elections are over. A possible reason for waiting, if intimations given out by callers on the President have been correct, is that the national relief plans will follow the essential lines of Upton Sinclair's EPIC plan in California.

The administration is known to be considering with favor the idea of cutting down relief costs by taking millions of "employables" off the relief rolls and putting them to what Sinclair calls "productive work" in factories and on farms operated by the government.

U. S. IS ABOUT TO EMBARK ON NEW 'TVA' FOR TEXAS

Expected to Cost from 60 to 70 Millions.

with lolling, bored, shirt sleeved legislators and tossed this at them:

"That property isn't worth anything at present. We are giving it whatever value it has, under the government loan. Shouldn't we pay the federal government first?

"Find Out What It's For."

"We might go into this history and find out what these bonds are for. We ought to be able to buy directly from Thayer. Are we going to? No. We are buying from the Colorado River company. The Colorado River company received this property from Thayer. The Colorado River company is a private corporation organized by employés of Raiph Morrison. Mr. Morrison is a public utilities man who happens to own the largest utility in Mexico, the Laredo Power and Light company. He was connected with the Insull interests. He was the largest contributor to the Democratic campaign fund in Texas and next to the largest in the United States.

"As a reward of that $100,000 contribution he was made a member of the London economic conference. He goes to Washington and asks Ickes to give the Colorado River company a loan with which to build this dam. Ickes refuses the loan. Morrison then goes to the President and the President authorizes the loan if the state will create a public authority. What is Morrison's pay for getting this loan? We are not paying the owners. They get 49 per cent. Morrison gets 51 per cent.

Just Got the Loan.

"I don't believe you want Morrison, who hasn't put a thin dime into this—all he has done is to go to Washington and get a loan—I don't think you want to give him this. Mr. Hunt, PWA attorney, says it is worth about 3 million dollars. Without the loan it is not worth a cent.

"We give 3 million, 200 thousand for it; Morrison gets 51 per cent. He should be put off until the government gets paid. If Morrison was the great patriot and Democrat he should be, he would turn this over free to the state of Texas and that authority. If I were he I would not be tainted with that 51 per cent.

"He is a multimillionaire and he should be glad to do this for the United States. After all, we are the people who are putting money into this. We are the people of the United States. We want to be paid before the man who is getting 51 per cent."

This little lady did not get a hand. Emphatically not, her speech was greeted in silence. The leaders of the bill held a hurried conference. There was no defense offered.

"Where did you get this information?" one young legislator wanted to know.

Information from Court.

"From the court records," said Mrs. Hughes. "It says Malott owns 96 per cent of the Colorado River corporation. Malott is known as an employé of Morrison. The court order mentions that Morrison is to go to Washington to get this money. I have it right here in my desk."

There were no further questions and the amendment was passed, over the protests of the proponents of the bill, who said it was not acceptable.

"It makes the bonds non-negotiable," said one disgusted legislator off the record. "They aren't worth a damn now."

A gray haired legislator rushed by the press table saying something about "That little fool trying to show us how to run business."

While Mrs. Hughes won this point, the house later rushed through 40 amendments, suspended the rules and passed the bill by 99 to 13. A similar bill has passed the senate by a vote of 25 to 1. It now goes to conference, where the Hughes amendment may be eliminated and the whole thing pushed through tomorrow. Tuesday is the last day of this special session, which was called to vote relief bonds.

R. W. Wagstaff, representative from Abilene, where the bill is opposed in the interests of West Texas cattle men who use the up river water, referred to the project as a "one man deal." And "one man owns the lands," he said, without naming the man. The half completed dam, abandoned with the collapse of the Insull companies, was referred to as "a beautiful bunch of junk."

All "Taken to Cleaners."

"The federal government, the state and the people are being taken for a good cleaning in this bill," said Mr. Wagstaff, who was a lone voice in this wilderness.

"This will not cost Texas one red penny," was the reply to this. "This is a free gift from Uncle Sam, that great Santa Claus up in Washington."

It was pointed out that wide distribution of power is possible from this dam, similar to Muscle Shoals. It will create a lake 27 miles long in three counties, inundating cemeteries, highways and villages. Costs are to be paid out of revenue bonds issued by that authority, with the first exception of the 4½ million loan from the government, 30 per cent of which is a gift. It is plain that this will be only a beginning, as the flow of the river is uneven and will have to be supplemented and strengthened by more dams, as in the Tennessee.

The power companies in the meantime claim they have all the power necessary, produced more cheaply than can be done in this project. The Trinidad plant of the Texas Power and Light company, for instance, has perfected a way of using pulverized lignite, and has supplies on hand for a thousand years. The government concern will have to sell in the same territory tapped by this company, and therefore the company cannot compete with it because of taxation. The power companies did not appear in the fight against this bill, however, regarding it as hopeless.

"River of Abandoned Dams."

The Colorado river might be called the river of abandoned dams. Power men for many years looked it over and decided it was not a profitable source of energy in a land of gas, oil, and coal. The Insull group, however, when they were reaching out to build their empire network over the country selected it as one of their sites and began what is known as the Hamilton dam 80 miles up the river from Austin.

This, now called the Buchanan dam, after Congressman James P. Buchanan of Texas, chairman of the house committee on appropriations, is the one that is to be completed by the government loan. The Insull people forced two of their subsidiaries in Texas to sign contracts to take power from this dam at 7½ mills, which was estimated to be the production cost.

As there is plenty of power available now at 3 mills, this was declared exorbitant after the Insull collapse and these contracts were annulled. The dam project now starts out from scratch and must take business away from operating companies unless a new market is built by lending towns and individuals money to buy power, as in the Tennessee valley.

Insull Investment $2,389,000.

The investment of the Insull stockholders in this project is $2,389,000 in a concern known as the Central Texas Hydro-Electric company. This was held by the Mississippi Valley Utilities company and, in a report of Receiver Thayer on April 12 last, it is described as "wholly worthless." On Sept. 4, pursuant to an agreement entered into "after long negotiations with Morrison," the property was sold to Receiver Thayer and transferred to the Colorado river company. There was a barbecue at the dam site and 100 persons attended, including Morrison, Thayer, and Congressman Buchanan. All this had the approval of Federal Judge Walter C. Lindley in Chicago, who, however, did not pass on the feasibility of the loan or the project as a whole. The interest of this court and the receiver was in getting some value for the stockholders. The government loan apparently has done this, if it is finally approved.

At the senate-house hearing here early this month Henry T. Hunt, general counsel for the PWA, appeared. It developed that A. J. Wirtz, former state senator and receiver for the Central Texas company, had sought a loan of the RFC for the completion of the dam, but had been denied.

The head of the RFC is the canny Texan, Jesse R. Jones. As soon as PWA was formed a loan was asked there but denied on the ground that this was a private corporation.

Then Buchanan Acts.

It was then, according to statements made at this hearing, that the project was brought to the attention of the President by Congressman Buchanan and Senator Tom Connally. Mr. Buchanan said it was the President himself who had suggested that the Texas legislature be asked to create a public authority to direct the enterprise and to safeguard it forever against private ownership.

This proposition was fought in Washington and Texas in its first stages by the Middle West Utilities company, the big Insull holding concern which is chief creditor of the Mississippi Valley company. It was fought on general grounds of policy and on specific charges that the power contracts involved were exorbitant. These contracts were subsequently canceled and Middle West faded from the picture.

One of the last acts of the late Edward N. Hurley, who with Charles A. McCulloch was appointed receiver for Middle West, was to block this loan.

It was stated in the application for the loan that the project would become self-supporting in three years and the loan would be liquidated out of revenues in 13.

Hurley-McCulloch Answer.

The Hurley-McCulloch answer to the petition contains these paragraphs:

"Respondents are advised and believe, and therefore aver, that the proposed enterprise is wasteful and unnecessary. The present capacity of the chief utility companies in Texas is far in excess of their present requirements, being at the present time nearly 100 per cent greater than their respective peak loads. These companies will not need additional capacity or energy for many years to come. The proposed enterprise is in its essential nature an enterprise for the sale of electric energy.

"Upon the best information that respondents can obtain they believe the proposed enterprise will be unprofitable even though the operating companies could be held to the terms of the power contracts. The proposed enterprise, if it were consummated, could result only in offering power for sale when there is at the present time, and for the reasonable future, much more than the market can absorb, and, if irrigation be contemplated, the bringing into cultivation of more agricultural land at a time when it is common knowledge that an excess of cultivated acreage is one of the important contributing factors in the present depression.

"So far as can be gleaned from the petition and the proposed agreements, and the Mississippi receiver has shown nothing to the contrary, no funds whatever are being invested in this deal by the Colorado River company. Respondents have been informed and believe that it is the intention to finance this entire project by borrowing funds from the RFC."

Receiver Brings Up Point.

In a further memorandum submitted in court the receiver for Middle West raised another question, the same as that raised by Mrs. Hughes before the legislature yesterday. It stated:

"If the project which the Mississippi receiver invites this court to enter is really meritorious and by virtue of an investment heretofore made, can be entirely financed by borrowed money without the risk of a single dollar on the part of the receivership estate, then why should not the receiver himself put through the project and keep for his estate the entire benefit? Why do Mr. Thayer's co-adventurers get 51 per cent of the net profit of an enterprise to which they contribute not a penny?"

The Hurley-McCulloch petition characterizes the project as "unsound, unscientific, uneconomic, and foredoomed to failure."

Nobody will lose, however, except the federal government. The Texas legislature will go ahead on this assumption, probably tomorrow.

And the answer to the query of why Mr. Morrison and his 51 per cent, may be gleaned from the following news item in the Fort Worth Star Telegram for last Friday:

"Laredo, Tex., Sept. 19.—(AP)—Raymond Moley, close friend of President Roosevelt, and Sam Rayburn, Texas congressman, mentioned as possible successor to Henry T. Rainey as speaker of the house, paused here briefly today and then continued on to Mexico for a friendly visit. They came to Laredo with R. W. Morrison of San Antonio, one of the delegates to the London economic conference. Moley and Rayburn arrived at Rayburn's north east Texas home from Washington Sunday. They went to the home of John N. Garner, Vice President, at Uvalde, ate doves Garner had killed, and spent the night at Morrison's ranch not far from Laredo."

SECOND CRASH VICTIM DIES.

Hartford City, Ind., Sept. 23.—(AP)—Harry Toot, 62, of Dayton, O., died in a hospital here today, second victim of an automobile accident last Wednesday. Mrs. James Puls, 74, also of Dayton, died a few hours after the accident.

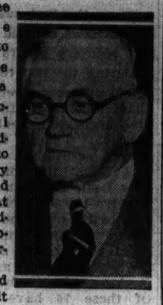
G. O. P. EXPECTS TO END DEFICIT BY NOVEMBER

Getz to Give Optimistic Report Today.

George F. Getz, treasurer of the Republican national committee, said last night he expected the committee would raise enough money to pay up its entire deficit before the November elections. He will make that optimistic report to Chairman Henry P. Fletcher and other leaders at their western division meeting today in headquarters here.



GEORGE F. GETZ.

Mr. Getz found a $206,000 deficit when he took the treasurership several months ago. More than half of it already has been wiped out and pledges given by state organizations cover the remainder.

Chairman Fletcher and National Committeemen Spangler of Iowa, Ball of Indiana, Requa of California, and other members of the executive committee are to plan the campaign windup and discuss finances this morning at the western headquarters, 332 South Michigan avenue.

Reports on Indiana's Swing.

Congressman Chester Bolton of Ohio and Senator L. J. Dickinson of Iowa, chairmen of the congressional and western senatorial committees, respectively, will sit in with the executive committee today and tomorrow as a prelude to the meeting of 32 Republican senatorial candidates, over whom Senator Daniel O. Hastings of Delaware is to preside on Sunday in the Palmer house.

Indiana will be found safely in the Republican column when the ballots are counted in November, according to Don H. Irwin, chairman of the state's Republican committee. He told western headquarters yesterday to expect the reelection of United States Senator Arthur R. Robinson, the capture of six additional congressional seats, and a rebuff to Gov. Paul V. McNutt.

"The people of Indiana will show their displeasure at Gov. McNutt on Nov. 6," Irwin declared. "Never in the history of the state has there been a more unpopular governor.

Taxpayers Count Costs.

"The taxpayers of the state are beginning to realize that the millions and millions of dollars being spent by the administration, most of it for political purposes, will have to be paid some time by them or their descendants."

Today local Democratic headquarters will begin planning for a turnout of 25,000 at their county convention on Friday in the Chicago Stadium. Postmaster General James A. Farley is to speak.

Mr. Farley passed through Chicago last night on his way to Buffalo for the New York state Democratic convention at which Gov. Herbert Lehman is to be renominated. He said his party would gain seats in congress and that he has found the people satisfied with the Roosevelt administration. Postal receipts for the twelve largest cities showed a 6 per cent increase last week over the same week in 1933, according to Mr. Farley, who saw in this rise evidence of business improvement.

Headquarters to Be Opened.

The county committee will meet in the Morrison hotel this morning and Chairman Patrick A. Nash, who is also national committeeman, will open headquarters for state and county candidates.

About 20,000 persons attended the 38th ward regular Democratic organization picnic yesterday.

Young Democrats of Cook county will meet at 6:30 p. m. today in the Boston Oyster house to hear Jacob M. Braude, associate director of the state department of finance, discuss "The Young Man's Place in Politics."

Mayor to Speak on City's Outlook at Banquet Oct. 9

Mayor Kelly will speak on "Chicago's Name Redeemed—the Outlook for 1935," as the guest of the Franklin D. Roosevelt Club of Chicago at a banquet on Oct. 9 in the Stevens hotel, according to Robert W. McKinley, president. Others to talk are Gov. Horner, State's Attorney Courtney, Senators James Hamilton Lewis, and William H. Dieterich, and State Chairman Bruce A. Campbell of Belleville.

SPAIN DECLARES 'STATE OF ALARM'; FEARS CIVIL WAR

[Copyright: 1934: By the New York Times.]

MADRID, Sept. 23.—A decree proclaiming a state of alarm, a modified form of martial law, was signed by President Niceto Alcala Zamora late last night and became effective this morning with its publication in the official Gazette.

Addressing an audience of farmers at the national irrigation congress at Valladolid today, the president expressed regret that political dissension had developed to a stage where the country was threatened with "civil war." Left extremists issued a warning in their press today that participation of the Catholic right wing in a new government will be a signal for a Red revolution.

Discovery by the police of guns and munitions deposits has convinced the government that the workers' united front, composed of Socialists, syndicalists, and communist labor unions, is armed with wartime efficiency. A succession of arrests and arms seizures has revealed, according to the authorities, that the extremists had planned wholesale assassinations and the burning of government buildings as a preliminary to setting up a proletarian dictatorship. Two gunboats are looking for the steamer Turquesa, which landed a cargo of arms and munitions at San Sebastian de Pravia.

TRUCK DRIVER BURNS TO DEATH.

Frankfort, Ind., Sept. 23.—(AP)—A truck driver believed to be William H. Newman, 21, of Cincinnati, was burned to death early today after the vehicle ran off the highway, turned over, and burst into flames.

"We save 2 gallons of gas per day with our FORD V·8 SEDAN DELIVERY"

The Ford V-8 Sedan Delivery is priced at $565, f. o. b. Detroit

READ HOW THIS DES MOINES SERVICE COMPANY HAS REDUCED ITS DELIVERY COSTS!

"We recently added another Ford V-8 unit to our fleet. This unit replaced a more expensive make. Our gasoline consumption has been reduced two gallons a day and we cover the same route. The Ford V-8 will run all week without adding oil, whereas we had to add two quarts a week to the unit it replaced." reports Retail Merchants Delivery, Des Moines, Iowa.

But Ford V-8 economy just begins with the saving in oil and gasoline. It includes low first cost, low maintenance cost, and low cost of parts and repairs.

This owner also reports that the Ford V-8 Sedan Delivery operates over some of the roughest streets in the city, and often carries fragile merchandise. A company engaged in delivery work can make money only when the charge for delivery is low enough to attract customers, yet high enough to leave a profit after operating expenses are deducted. That means operating costs must be held to a minimum. And that's why this company uses Ford V-8's.

Why not check these costs in your own business? See for yourself what Ford V-8 Commercial Cars will do with your own loads, over your own routes, with your own driver at the wheel!

$350 AND UP (F. O. B. DETROIT)

85-HORSEPOWER V-8 ENGINE
Dual carburetor and dual intake manifold give faster acceleration and higher speeds that cut down delivery time. V-8 engine uses no more fuel than a "four." Exhaust valve seat inserts make valve grinding seldom necessary.

LOW-COST ENGINE EXCHANGE PLAN
After tens of thousands of miles of economical service, you can exchange your original engine for a block-tested, factory-reconditioned engine at much less than the cost of an engine overhaul and without tying up your truck for more than a few hours.

FULL TORQUE-TUBE DRIVE
All driving and braking stresses are transmitted by a full torque tube and radius-rods. Springs have nothing to do but cushion the load against road shocks.

These are but a few of the worth-while features of the Ford V-8 Commercial Car. Ask your Ford dealer for an "on-the-job" test and complete details.

THOUSANDS JAM FAIR AS SUNSHINE FLOODS GROUNDS

Attendance Well Ahead of Needed Average.

BY EARL MULLIN.

Under sunny skies, Fair goers poured through the turnstiles yesterday, pushing the attendance total up to within striking distance of a Sunday record. The continuation of high attendance days increases the hope that the Exposition will be able to pay one hundred cents on the dollar on all outstanding obligations.

Last Wednesday M. M. Tveter, controler of the Fair, using admittedly ultra conservative figures, announced that a final attendance of 16,500,000 persons would permit the Fair to pay off all its gold note issue, pay expenses of demolition, and end with no outstanding obligations. To reach this figure, he said, a daily average of 115,000 admissions would be needed.

Since that announcement, including the day it was made, but excluding yesterday, the following daily admissions were recorded: 100,174, 115,271, 145,343, and 108,909 for a daily average of 117,424 admissions.

Yesterday's unexpected surge sent the average to more than 126,000 daily. At midnight yesterday the official attendance was 159,562.

Georgians Arrive Today.

Georgia moves on the Fair today for a week of ceremonies, entertainment, and parades. Among the notables arriving today for the week's festivities are Gov. Eugene Talmadge and his official party and one hundred Georgia girls, representing the beauty of the southland.

Three special trains are bringing the southerners to Chicago, leaving Atlanta yesterday morning and arriving this morning.

One Georgian, Ralph Pullen, 28 years old, of McRae, who peered at his welcomers from behind a luxuriant red beard, arrived yesterday in an ox cart. The 1,000 mile trip required ten weeks. The cart was more remarkable than either its driver or Mac, the ox that pulled it. The body was similar to those used by the pioneers of '49, but was mounted upon automobile wheels with pneumatic tires. Mac wore out five pairs of shoes on the trip to Chicago.

Official Welcome Tomorrow.

The governor and his official family and the ox cart man will be welcomed simultaneously tomorrow. At 11 a. m. military honors and a salute of nineteen guns will be given the official party in the Court of Honor.

The week of Georgia special events opens tonight with a peach ball in the Morrison hotel. The peach queen will be selected as a finale to the night's festivities with the remainder of the hundred beauties acting as her court. The peaches were selected at peach balls throughout the state. Gov. Talmadge will crown the queen tomorrow afternoon in the Court of States.

Although the Georgians will remain in Chicago all week, most of the formalities will be held tomorrow. The afternoon will open with a parade of Georgia beauties and dignitaries from the Administration building to the Court of States after a luncheon.

The program in the Court of States will open with a concert by the 122d Infantry band. Addresses by Rufus C. Dawes, president of the Fair, and by Gov. Talmadge will follow.

Music, songs, and the introductions of the "Peaches" will precede the coronation. A reception in the Georgia exhibit in the Hall of States will close the formal part of the week's celebration.

OX CART MAKES TRIP FROM GEORGIA TO FAIR

This modernized ox cart completed a 1,000 mile trip at the World's Fair yesterday, having come from Atlanta, Ga. Ralph Pullen, who drove the cart, is shown receiving congratulations from Russell Whitman, general manager of the Georgia exhibit, as S. J. McGarry, Georgia commissioner, looks on. Georgia will be honored at the Fair today with special ceremonies.

'MISS CHICAGO' GUARDED AFTER ATTACK BY GANG

Miss Alice Jaglowski, 19 years old, who as winner of a city-wide beauty contest was crowned "Miss Chicago" at the World's Fair Sept. 19, was being guarded yesterday following an attack by hoodlums upon her and an escort Thursday night.

According to Miss Jaglowski, several young men leaped on the running board of her car as she was leaving St. Adalbert's church, 1650 West 17th street, following a reception at which she was guest of honor. Her escort, she said, was Withold Trawinski, editor of a Polish newspaper.

While Trawinski fought off the attackers with his fists, Miss Jaglowski related, she seized the steering wheel of the coupe in which they were riding to prevent the car from crashing into the curbing. One man sought to strike Trawinski on the head with a whisky bottle, but Miss Jaglowski deflected the blow.

Dropping off the running board of the car, the hoodlums entered their own machine and gave chase, the beauty winner related. Trawinski drove south to Cermak road, where the pursuers gave up the chase. The Marquette police furnished a guard for the Jaglowski home the following day and yesterday.

Noel Coward, Author, Buys Residence in East

WORLD'S FAIR NOTES

Miss Louise Schmaltz, who was selected as Miss New Orleans in 1933 and as Miss Louisiana this year, arrived yesterday to compete in the "Miss Century of Progress" contest, the preliminaries of which will begin tonight on the Midway boardwalk at the Fair. Five girls of each of the nationalities represented in the United States will be selected at the preliminaries this week and this number will be reduced to one each in the semi-finals Saturday night. Visitors to the Exposition will vote for their choice between Oct. 1 and Oct. 9, Chicago day, when Miss Century of Progress will be chosen.

Brig. Gen. Leroy T. Steward, 73 years old, who served as chief of police in Chicago from 1909 to 1911, and who for years was superintendent of the Chicago postoffice, yesterday was the millionth visitor to Merrie England Village at A Century of Progress. Gen. Steward was guest of the management at a performance of "Julius Caesar" in the Old Globe theater and had luncheon at the Red Lion inn.

Three foreign advertising managers of the Eastman Kodak company will visit the Hall of Photography today. They are R. Julian Yeatman of Kodak, Ltd., London; H. P. Derveaux of Kodak-Pathe, Paris, and Dr. H. A. Kluge of Berlin.

The Carnival of Fun has been extended another week with free admission to the grounds of all who arrive in costumes of the days prior to 1890, comic or nationality costumes, at the 14th street entrance between 7 and 8 p. m.

British General, Detroit Born, Drowns in Squall

INSTOW, North Devon, England, Sept. 23.—(AP)—Maj. Gen. Henry P. Leader, born in Detroit in 1865, and Col. W. R. E. Harrison, drowned today as a sudden squall struck a 17 foot yacht they were sailing. Mrs. Harrison was rescued by life guards. Leader was educated at Trinity college, Fort Hope, Ont. He served through the Boer war in a cavalry division, and in the world war commanded the First Scottish Horse. He retired in 1920.

George Morris, 90, G. A. R., Holds Open House for 100

George W. Morris, civil war veteran, who was 90 years old on Saturday, held open house yesterday for a hundred friends at his home at 2901 Warren boulevard. Mr. Morris, a past commander of the George H. Thomas post of the G. A. R., enlisted in the Second Illinois cavalry at Tonica, Ill., when he was 19 years old. He is a widower and lives with his two daughters.

PUBLIC PAYS FOR NEW DEAL PRESS AGENTS' OUTPUT

Ickes' Department Leads in Volume.

Washington, D. C., Sept. 23.—[Special.]—An enormous amount of piffle is put out by the army of government press agents at taxpayers' expense, the rule appearing to be that the more a department has to conceal the more piffle it exudes.

The piffle output of Secretary of the Interior Ickes' press agents now holds first place in point of volume. Here are some random selections from today's outgiving, entitled "Nature Notes from the National Parks."

Mrs. Marten, Children Check Out.

"Complaints on the camping accommodations are seldom received by Owen A. Tomlinson, superintendent of Mount Rainier national park, but if actions speak louder than words a matronly Marten was plumb disgusted with them.

"With her two babies she took possession one night of a tent bed near the mess hall. Early next morning she checked out. Whether she found the place too drafty, lacking in sufficient clearance—just what was wrong, she did not state. She merely sniffed her disdain and left, bag and baggage, and without so much as a backward glance of gratitude for the free lodgings."

Fall Styles in Leaves.

"As a result of the protracted drouth, an early showing of fall fashions among the hardwood trees of Hot Springs National park is scheduled. By the end of July many of them were already showing their autumn coloring.

"Trees in Zion and Bryce canyon national parks, on elevations from 5,000 to 7,000 feet, were changing their green for the fall tints and shedding their leaves all through July, and Yellowstone National park, also, put on an early show."

The Stork Didn't Bring Them.

"The gaze of a visitor to Rocky Mountain National park was riveted upon a hole in a hollow tree. Through the small opening a sapsucker was feeding her brood inside. 'I don't see how that bird ever got inside that little bit of a hole to lay her eggs' mused the visitor. 'I can't understand it.'

"'O, those babies were delivered by parcel post,' spoke up a wit in the party of tourists, before the ranger naturalist had time to explain."

Vote Against Rehiring of Strike Breaking Teacher

Gillespie, Ill., Sept. 23.—(AP)—Taxpayers of the Gillespie High school district voted 1,660 to 1,015 against rehiring David Tallman, a teacher who allegedly acted as a strike breaker last summer, a tabulation indicated today. The special election was called after a students' strike.

ROUTS PROWLER AT CHILD'S 2D STORY WINDOW

A prowler, possibly bent on kidnaping, was routed last night from the home of Alexander Ross, 450 Oakdale avenue, by the screams of Ross' 5 year old granddaughter, Barbara Schwartz.

The little girl awakened to see the prowler at her bedroom window. He had climbed up the outside of the apartment house to the second floor and was removing a screen when Barbara woke up.

Her cries brought Ross to the room, but by that time the invader had leaped an entire story to the ground. He fled up an alley as Ross fired several shots at him.

FAMED AYER ART TREASURES GO ON BLOCK THIS WEEK

Chicago Capitalist's Estate Bankrupt.

A collection of antiques, curios and historical relics valued at $150,000 will go on the block next Saturday at an auction of the household effects belonging to the estate of Mrs. Emma H. Ayer, widow of Edward Ayer, capitalist and art collector.

During his lifetime Mr. Ayer donated valuable collections to the Field museum, of which he was the first president; to the Newberry library, the Chicago Art institute and the Chicago Historical society, but in his two homes—the Oaks at Lake Geneva and 2 Banks court, Chicago — he had amassed other works of art. It is these which will go on sale next week.

Estate in Bankruptcy.

Although Mr. Ayer's estate was valued at $600,000 at the time of his death in 1927, the estate of Mrs. Ayer, who died in December, 1932, is now bankrupt. The four story stone Ayer residence at the northeast corner of North State and Banks streets was sold in 1933 for $60,000 and "The Oaks" is up for sale. All furnishings left in the two homes will be auctioned in addition to many works of art which formerly were on display in the Art institute.

Collectors are said to be interested in the collection of firearms and other implements of war dating from the tenth century which is listed for sale.

7-Foot German Swords.

Among the treasures are two fifteenth century swords of state, seven feet long and of hammered iron, which were used by Imperial German guardsmen; a Japanese hand cannon or teepoo, with black lacquered wood stock and gold decorations; a tenth century halbard, inlaid with onyx; a scimitar with inlays of turquoise and coral; a German wheelock of the 16th century, a Saracen helmet, a Persian lether shield, and an old Moorish musket.

Other items, loaned by Mr. Ayer to the Art institute and retrieved by the administrators for this bankruptcy sale, are an immense Chippendale sideboard, mahogany with shell top and elaborate carving; a miniature oil painting, "Head of St. Francis," by Guido Reni, with an original etching, "The River of Reno" on its back, which has hung in the institute since 1894; "Portrait of a Lady in Black" by Hans Holbein and ten illuminated missal pages, the work of monks of the middle ages.

Included in the "household effects" are 4,000 pieces of glassware, 3,000 books, rugs, tapestries, brocades, furniture and 460 separate lots of silver, much of which consists of museum pieces. Among the latter is a German ladle, 14th century and a Romanesque jardiniere, its sides covered with religious figures, 12th century.

Among the more personal pieces is one of interest to numerous Chicagoans. A small wooden chest containing a dessert service of silver gilt inlaid with tortoise shell [made by Crichton of London]; it bears this inscription on its cover:

"For Mr. and Mrs. Edward E. Ayer on their golden wedding day, Sept. 6, 1915, from their friends. Mr. and Mrs. John J. Mitchell, Mr. and Mrs. Edward F. Swift, Mr. and Mrs. Frederick D. Countiss, Mr. and Mrs. Tracy C. Drake, Mr. and Mrs. Simeon B. Chapin."

FAMOUS PAINTING TO BE SOLD

"Portrait of a Lady in Black," by Hans Holbein, one of works of art from $150,000 collection of the late Mrs. Edward Everett Ayer which will go on auction block next Saturday. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

4,500 Census Takers Strike in Cuba; Demand More Pay

[Copyright: 1934: By the New York Times.]

HAVANA, Sept. 23.—The census takers appointed recently to register all voters in Cuba declared a strike last night, demanding higher wages. The government is now paying 7 cents per registration. There are 4,500 census takers. A census was started Thursday for the scheduled elections to the constituent assembly Dec. 3. Ninety-three census workers were arrested in Santiago yesterday on the charge of provoking a strike.

SMOKE ROUTS CAFE DINERS.

Fire which started in a grease chute in the kitchen of Lindy's restaurant, 114 North Dearborn street yesterday smoked out about 80 guests and did damage estimated at $200 before it was extinguished.

TNT AND ARSON CASES WILL GO TO TRIAL TODAY

Bucket Shop Testimony Is Due to Begin.

Three important criminal trials are scheduled to get under way in the Criminal courts this morning.

The case which is expected to take the longest to try, perhaps three or four months, will be that of the so-called TNT (Trucking and Transport exchange) racketeering conspiracy.

In this prosecution State's Attorney Courtney makes his second court attack on alleged business and labor racketeering in Chicago. His first such endeavor resulted in a jury acquittal on May 5 of Prof. Benjamin Squires, University of Chicago economist; Attorneys Aaron Sapiro and Morris L. Kaplan, and 14 other defendants. The 17 were charged with conspiracy to fix prices in the carbonated beverage, linen supply, cleaning and dyeing, and laundry industries by violence and terrorism. The trial lasted four months, costing the state $250,000 and the defendants an equal sum.

Fourteen to Face Court.

Benedict J. Short, a defense lawyer in the first trial, is chief of counsel for the TNT defendants. He predicted jury selection would require at least several days and perhaps several weeks. Judge William V. Brothers is to preside.

Only 14 of the 17 indicted in the case are to go to trial today, as several persons sought have not been captured and others have died, notably William J. [Three Fingered Jack] White, the gangster, who was murdered.

Among the accused are John M. Bransfield, a paving contractor; John Sheridan Sr., veteran labor leader; Marcus (Studdy) Looney, labor leader, many times arrested, and a group of other labor officials. The prosecution charges that through the TNT exchange the defendants racketeered in several industries, including trucking and paving.

First Arson Case Up.

A trial not expected to take more than ten days, but which Prosecutor Courtney considers of vital importance to the welfare of the community, is an arson case scheduled to start before Judge Harry B. Miller.

Judge Miller, however, is expected to be kept busy for several months trying more than two dozen indictments involving upwards of sixty defendants in arson conspiracies, one of them resulting in a murder. The first case to be tried is to be the one in which the state first obtained its information that a gigantic $1,000,000 arson trust existed in Chicago.

The defendants in this case are Nick Basuris, owner of the Metropolitan Press, 3811 North avenue; Abe Blank, a public insurance adjuster; Valentine Notari, "torch," who sets fires, and one of the leaders in the gang; Mrs. Elsie Pisani, one of the two women members of the gang; Jack Brown, a public adjuster, and Joseph De Cico, a go-between in the fire negotiations between Basuris and the gang.

Ready for Bucket Shop Witnesses.

Before a jury chosen last week in Judge Joseph La Buy's court, testimony is to start this morning on the $1,000,000 bucket shop charges against Leonard Rollnick, Ben Reuben, P. J. Greene, Barney Lavin, Ernest Wahl Simon, G. William Herbs, and Albert L. Sherman. They are accused of exchanging questionable stocks for sound securities in dealings in Illinois, Indiana, Wisconsin, and Ohio.

Associated Press Moves Offices After 15 Years

The Chicago office of the Associated Press was moved yesterday from the Ashland block, 155 North Clark street, to new and larger quarters in the Burnham building, 160 North La Salle street. The old offices were occupied for fifteen years. A corps of technicians effected the move without a break in the wire service, between 2:30 a. m. and 3 p. m., when the wires are shut down. There was no stop in the transportation wire service at 2:30 o'clock, and by 6 a. m. all circuits, including twenty-five separate wires, were in operation.

14 SAVED AFTER LEAP FROM BURNING BOAT INTO HUDSON RIVER

New York, Sept. 23.—(AP)—Fourteen persons were rescued tonight when they leaped into the Hudson river from the blazing cabin cruiser Dot about 200 feet off shore at 153d street. Among them were eight women and two children.

Joseph and Leo McCann and Leo Kaiser, observing the fire from the McCanns' boathouse, set out in rowboats and brought the fourteen safely ashore.

The cruiser, owned by William Grossman, sank shortly after the arrival of a fireboat. Grossman said there was a sudden explosion and the craft burst into flames. Passengers immediately leaped overboard. There was no time to seek life belts.

FIRE SHOTGUN THROUGH WINDOW.

Two men returned to a tavern at 5157 Archer avenue Friday night shortly after Floyd Goralski, the night watchman, had driven them away, and fired a shotgun through the front plate glass window.

TWO NAVY PLANES DASH WITH SERUM TO RELIEVE CHILD

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti, Sept. 23.—(AP)—Two United States navy airplanes dropped their war games in the Caribbean sea today to make a 100 mile dash in an effort to save the life of a 13 year old girl.

The planes brought serum from the aircraft carrier Saratoga to Port-au-Prince for the daughter of Charles Fequire, a Haitian government engineer. The girl is suffering from pneumonia. The Saratoga, participating in maneuvers, lay in the Bay of Gonaives. A request for the serum was dispatched to it by the Haitian government radio station.

Lieut. R. W. Ruble commanded the planes, which took off immediately and completed the 100 mile flight in 40 minutes. Stanley Woodward, American charge d'affaires here, met the planes. He asked Lieut. Ruble to communicate to Admiral H. V. Butler, commander of the American aircraft battle forces at Gonaives, the appreciation of all Haitians and the family of the little girl.

Gas or Oil COST TWICE AS MUCH AS Coal or Coke

I HAVE NEVER USED OVER $120.00 OF COAL IN A SEASON

THIS true experience as revealed by a coal and coke user definitely proves that the claim "it costs you nothing to try gas heat" is not founded on fact. For it cost Mr. Greenberg $103.83 for 75 heating days, even in mild weather! And he went on paying until the gas burner was taken out!

Your dependable, economical furnace has been called out-of-date. Nothing is out-of-date if it will save you half your heating bill in a single season!

So many home owners have written to tell us about the proven economy of coal or coke as against other fuels that we publish their letters exactly as written! If you have been urged to "try" gas heat, stop and consider what many others have learned about the economy of comfortable, generous heat with solid fuel!

Order a bin full of coal or coke now from any member of this Association. You will be assured of careful grading, honest weight and uniform quality. Order now!

"I Paid $103.83 for 75 Days of Gas Heat"*

... writes Mr. Chas. G. Greenberg
4844 N. Monticello Avenue
Chicago, Ill.

● "I think I am in a pretty fair position to prove . . . coal is positively the cheapest and most economical (fuel) and will actually cost less than one-half either oil or gas heat.

"The first few years in my own residence I used coal and always found my home comfortable at all hours, day or night. One day I listened to an oil salesman . . . and I paid $700 for an oil burner and tank.

"The oil bills were very high . . . I had never used over $120 of coal in a season, and we like our home comfortable at all times. This included garage heat also. The smallest oil bill for a season was $240. Just double what coal heat would cost, and I cut off the garage heat.

"Our Gas Company estimated our nine months heating season . . . at $140 to $160 . . . the first 45 days cost me the unbelievable sum of $72.07. I ordered it out and after another month it was removed but I had another bill of $31.76 . . . and the weather was very mild. That was $103.83 for 75 days!

"... at the rate it was going it would have cost me over $300 which is three times the cost of coal or coke . . . I had my grates, etc., put back into shape . . . and I will positively save from $150 to $175 this winter.

"Coal is at least always dependable, no breakdowns, and safe with no danger of explosion or fumes which are common with oil or gas."

Very truly yours,

Charles G. Greenberg

* Ask any member of the Chicago Coal Merchants Association to show you the file of "True Experiences" letters from home owners all over the city who have tried gas or oil and gone back to Coal or Coke as their most economical, dependable fuel!

WOULD YOU LIKE TO CARRY MORE INSURANCE FOR THE FAMILY?

Let Coal Heat Savings Pay the Premiums!

With the money that coal or coke saves you each year you can take out extra insurance for the family . . . you can even buy more new clothes, take a trip, buy a new car. Coal heat will help you buy the things you want!

WRATH FOUND RISING AT GAS TAX DIVERSION

Oil Official Cites Switch of $88,000,000.

BY HAL FOUST.

F. E. Packard, central division chairman of the American Petroleum Industries committee, declared yesterday that Illinois motorists are in a mood to rebel against continued diversions of gasoline tax revenue from the road funds while this money is needed for the improvement of trafic facilities. The petroleum committee was organized to present the views of the industry on legislative questions and other public matters.

Chicago's proposed superhighway system was mentioned as one of these essential enterprises.

Mr. Packard listed diversions or commitments in 1933 and 1934 of $88,035,000 from the Illinois levy. This sum is exclusive of the $45,000,000 borrowed by the state from the government, which might be charged to the federal motor fuel levy. It includes, however, the $30,000,000 relief bond issue on which a referendum is to be taken next month and the estimated $13,180,000 interest that will be required before that issue is retired. That issue is to be used chiefly to retire tax anticipation warants whose proceeds have been spent.

Questions Fairness of Practice.

"While the courts have upheld the legal right of the state to divert gasoline taxes to general purposes," the industry's representative said, "there is no doubt that the practice is regarded by motorists generally as unfair.

"If the entire proceeds of the gasoline tax are not needed for road construction and maintenance the tax is too high and should be reduced. As a matter of fact, there is probably no longer need of such large sums for roads in Illinois.

"Inexpensive surfacing of secondary and 'farm to market' roads is now the main need in rural districts. In the cities some work is still needed on through routes connecting with state and national highways.

Cites Projects in Chicago.

"In the metropolitan district of Chicago there is need of continuous grade separation to speed up the flow of trafic through the congested areas of the west and northwest sides, and through the territory from the southern end of the outer drive to the broad highways at the foot of Lake Michigan.

"If the funds collected from motorists cannot be applied to these projects the taxes extracted from them are without justification.

"The time is probably nearing when the motorists of Illinois will rise against being burdened with far more than their share of the tax load. They are likely eventually to force legislation which will make payment of the relief bonds a charge upon all taxpayers alike and readjust the gasoline tax to its proper use for road building and maintenance purposes only."

Horner Squaring for a Fight.

Candidates for office and others campaigning the state are capitalizing on this resentment of the motorists toward gasoline taxes and license fees while denied the trafic facilities they have sought, such as elevated highways for Chicago. They are urging a reduction in these special taxes.

The Horner administration is preparing for a fight to protect its road revenues before the general assembly meeting in January. The task of the administration is to convince the motorists and their representatives in the legislature that with the revenues undisturbed the state will compensate car drivers for their taxes with the construction of facilities enhancing the pleasure and utility of automobile operation.

Mexico Demands Envoys Resign Prior to Sept. 30

[Copyright: 1934: By the New York Times.]

MEXICO CITY, Sept. 23.—Foreign Secretary Puig announced tonight that all Mexican ambassadors, ministers, and chargé d'affaires have been advised they must send in their resignations prior to Sept. 30. This action is made necessary because of a new law giving the incoming presidential administration a clear path. He said the ambassadors to Spain and Brazil are expected to deliver their resignations personally, as they already are en route to Mexico City.

WOMAN VISITOR TO FAIR KILLED, 6 HURT IN CRASH

Auto and Truck Hit Near Orland Park.

Mrs. Sybil Lantz, 34 years old, of Le Roy, Ill., was killed and six others were injured, two seriously, in a collision yesterday of an automobile truck and a car carrying visitors to the World's Fair. The accident occurred at 159th street and Keane avenue, a mile south of Orland Park.

Norma Jean Lantz, 8 years old, daughter of the dead woman, incurred a fracture of the skull, and John Tischler, 46, Beaver Dam, Wis., fractures of the left leg and right elbow. All were taken to the Oak Forest infirmary.

The four less seriously hurt are Mrs. Lantz's husband, Warren; his sister, Mrs. Lucille Dryer; her husband, Fred, a farmer of Bloomington, Ill., all passengers in the car driven by Lantz, and Louis Kummer, of Beaver Dam, the truck driver with whom Tischler was riding. State highway police began an investigation of the accident.

Infirmary Resident Dies.

The deaths of Mrs. Lantz and of a man brought the Cook county 1934 toll to 872. The other victim:

Harry Plotkin, 65 years old, who lived at the Oak Forest Infirmary, fatally injured when struck at Jackson boulevard and Lawndale avenue by the automobile of Louis Lewis, 31 years old, 3857 Jackson boulevard. Lewis was held. He told Fillmore street police he did not see Plotkin.

Louis Rach, 45 years old, 1639 North Maplewood avenue; his wife, Nellie, 44, and his son Clarence, 19, were in the County hospital yesterday suffering from serious injuries incurred in a collision of the car Rach was driving with another Saturday night at Noble street and Milwaukee avenue.

Tony De Vito, 19 years old, 772 Dekoven street, driver of the other car, and his companion, Miss Rose Murda, 19 years old, 5202 South Moody avenue, were cut and bruised. De Vito was held by Racine avenue police.

Girl in Critical Condition.

Miss Mabel Wagner, 19 years old, 431 Sullivan street, was in a critical condition from a skull fracture in the County hospital yesterday as the result of a trafic accident on Lake Shore drive, near Banks street, on Saturday night. Miss Wagner was struck by an automobile driven by Fred Garbe, 41 years old, 10242 Wentworth avenue. She was taken to Passavant hospital and transferred to the County hospital later. Garbe was not held.

She's Reducing Weight and That's What Worries Her

Springfield, Mo., Sept. 23.—[Special.]—The worries of Ruth Pontico of Chicago are increasing, for she strives as a trade necessity to be the world's fattest lady.

She has appeared that way with the Barnum & Bailey-Ringling Brothers circus. She was stricken with typhoid fever on Aug. 15. She still is in a hospital. It was learned that she had lost nearly 200 pounds.

Robber Binds Four; Takes $164 in Apartment Raid

John L. Coates, manager of the Gaylord Apartment hote, 5820 Kenmore avenue; his wife, Evelyn; their 19 year old son, John, and a guest of the hotel were bound hand and foot last night by a robber who invaded Coates' apartment. The gunman gained entrance by forcing Mrs. Edward Hilser, the guest, whom he encountered in the lobby, to knock on the apartment door. He took $164. Five minutes later Coates struggled free and notified Summerdale police.

CHICAGO OBSERVES SAFETY SUNDAY AS PASTORS VOICE PLAN

Safety Sunday was observed throughout the city yesterday. The day was set aside by Mayor Kelly to urge the necessity of reducing the growing list of automobile fatalities. Pastors spoke from their pulpits and at Sunday school classes of the need of caution.

"Being cautious and considerate of our fellow man is an essential part of religion," the Rev. John Thompson, pastor of the Methodist Episcopal church, declared yesterday. "This movement to curb injuries and deaths from automobile accidents carried on by the public officials, business, and professional men should be supported by the general public."

The Chicago Safety council at its fall dinner to be held at the grand ballroom of the Stevens hotel tomorrow night will present honor plaques to Chicago business concerns which have set records in the prevention of accidents in their plants and in the operation of their vehicles on the streets.

The plaques will be presented in connection with contests sponsored by the council.

Harry L. Sain, special representative of the safety and hygiene division of the Ohio Industrial commission, will be the principal speaker at the dinner.

Among the guests of honor will be Chief Justice J. J. Sonsteby of the Municipal court, Judge Harold P. o'Connell of the Safety court, Ald. John A. Massen, Police Commissioner James P. Allman, and Charles M. Hayes of the Chicago Motor club.

PREDICT BRITISH PRINCE WILL SIT ON GREEK THRONE

Peter Lambros, editor of the Greek Star, published in Chicago, declared yesterday he had received information that the engagement of Prince George, son of the king and queen of England, to Princess Marina of Greece presents the possibility of a political revolution which will result in the establishment of a monarchy in Greece again.

Under the republic the royalists have been growing stronger and Greece is not satisfied with a democracy, according to Lambros. He said England is Greece's natural ally and that Greece is anxious to strengthen its diplomatic relations.

Because King Constantine and his family are blamed for Greece's reverses in the world war and will not be accepted again, the Greek diplomats apparently have selected Princess Marina as their "agent," residents of Athens insist. Her wedding to Prince George is believed to have considerable political significance because it will also be performed under the rites of the Greek Orthodox church as well as the Church of England. In this way Prince George, who is favored by the Greek royalists, will become an adopted son of Greece and the marriage may be followed by his enthronement with the princess, according to information received by Lambros.

Burglar Gets Policeman's Trousers; He Reports Theft

Policeman Charles Wetter of the Warren avenue station went to the Fillmore avenue police station yesterday morning and reported that a burglar had stolen his trousers. The thief, he said, had entered his house at 1401 South Kenneth avenue during the night on a ladder against a window.

NEWS BIG WORLD PEACE FACTOR, SAYS ACKERMAN

Suggests Prize for Best Aid to Accord.

New York, Sept. 23.—[Special.]—World-wide study of journalism, largely to determine whether unrestricted distribution of news is not one of the best guarantees of peace, was urged on President Nicholas Murray Butler, president of Columbia university, today in the annual report of Carl W. Ackerman, dean of the school of journalism.

CARL ACKERMAN.

Dean Ackerman proposed a clearing house for information about the press of the world within the school of journalism. He also suggested endowment for an annual prize for the press association, newspaper or correspondent making the greatest contribution to international understanding.

Calls Press Control Perilous.

Describing "control" of the press in countries such as Italy, Germany, and Russia as a danger to peace, Dean Ackerman declared:

"What is needed is a series of serious world-wide studies by educational institutions in France, England, and the United States, the chief democracies of the world, which should take the lead in making international news not only the sinews of public opinion, but the sinews of peace.

"Today 'diplomatic journalism' is far in advance of political diplomacy just as public opinion on foreign affairs in the leading democracies of the world is in advance of government action. While the trend of governmental policies at home and abroad has been toward nationalism, the trend of journalism has been international.

News Easily Leaps Frontiers.

"Today communist, Fascist, Nazi, and New Deal political philosophies and economic plans meet and compete in the international news offices. News of world interest and world importance leaps frontiers and speeds to the press of foreign lands, where dictators are powerless and governments are called to account.

"Public officials, by their acts and their experiments, have made the world a journalistic laboratory wherein public policies tested daily in the crucible of public opinion. Nevertheless, news in its relation to government and international affairs is a subject upon which there is little factual knowledge and even less public understanding."

Press associations and individual newspapers are too occupied with their duties and responsibilities to study this problem, and the study would therefore be undertaken by an agency of the type of the proposed clearing house, the report stated. The report urged special study of the problems of government and private propaganda, and declared:

"Neither liberty nor peace will be secure with international news partly free and partly controled, because those who can regiment the minds of millions of people in one or more nations can create fear, suspicion, jealousy, and animosities more powerful than reason, tradition, justice, or law."

DEATH OF TWO FARM GIRLS, ILLNESS OF SIX PERSONS SEEMS PLOT

Whelen Springs, Ark., Sept. 23.—(AP)—Sherif Tom Tolleson of Clarke county said tonight he was of the opinion the death of two farm girls and illness of six other persons might be the third of a series of terrorist depredations at the farm of I. W. Kibler near here.

Tolleson said that about three years ago a well on the Kibler farm was poisoned, but the fact was discovered before serious harm resulted. About a year ago he said a house on the farm was burned and fences were broken.

Two daughters of Mr. and Mrs. B. Burnett, living on the Kibler place, died Thursday apparently from drinking poisoned well water. Mr. and Mrs. Burnett were in an Arkadelphia hospital today, and their condition was regarded as critical. A third daughter, aged 9, and a neighbor and her two small children were ill.

Sherif Tolleson said Kibler was a widely known planter and apparently had no enemies. The investigation so far has failed to uncover any clew as to why the Burnetts might be marked for vengeance.

SUSPECT CAUGHT AS AUTO CRASHES IN WILD CHASE

After an exciting chase last night through west side streets, during which numerous shots were fired, Frank Mayleo, 21 years old, of 1135 Townsend street, was captured by police. The driver of the automobile in which Mayleo was riding escaped on foot.

The car was sighted near Western avenue and Augusta street by Sergt. Florian Smuczynski, and his squad. The officers noticed that the machine was equipped with green and red lights, similar to a squad car and gave chase. Near Sacramento and Chicago avenues the police opened fire. One shot finally punctured a tire of the fleeing car, and it crashed into a building at 3017 Ohio street. Mayleo was seized before he could escape. He named his companion as Frank Bruno. The license of the car had been issued to a Fred Anselmo, 903 Cambridge avenue, but investigation disclosed that there was no one of that name at that address. Mayleo was held for questioning.

AUTOMOBILE THEFTS.

Automobiles stolen, 30; recovered, 22; stripped, 3 [from police records for 24 hours ending at midnight Saturday].

ACT TO RECOVER STATE CASH LOST ON CHARITY COAL

Relief Chiefs to Open Fight Tomorrow.

Action will be taken by the Illinois Emergency Relief commission tomorrow on claims totaling $67,310.35 against concerns which supplied coal purchased nearly two years ago, when wholesale substitutions of cheaper fuels were practiced by seven companies. The contracts were canceled in December, 1932, after the substitutions were exposed.

Originally the claims against the offending companies total $118,761.93. Why the claims have been reduced by $51,451 is a question expected to receive the attention of commission members.

Claim Summary Listed.

The summary of claims covers coal delivered from April 1, 1932, to Dec. 31, 1932, as follows:

	Tonnage of substitute coal.	Claim per ton.	Amount.
Wisconsin Lime and Cement company	40,636.16	$ .81	$33,077.28
Capitol Coal and Coke company	10,535.4	.87	9,165.80
M. F. Hughes Coal company	9,845.27	.87	8,565.38
Reiner Coal company	7,619.36	.86	6,552.65
F. Bieschke & Sons company	7,244.6	.86	6,302.80
Reading Coal company	2,610.26	1.05	2,740.77
Murray Coal company	444.46	.83	368.90
Murray Coal company	454.79	.87	395.67
Murray Coal company	134.39	1.05	141.10
			$67,310.35

These total claims compare with the original claims as follows:

Difference in price of nonspecification coals delivered	$100,329.67
Damages resulting from purchasing coal outside of state	11,308.34
Costs of audits, figured at 3 cents per ton	5,342.93
Costs of legal council	1,780.99
	$118,761.93

"The contractors involved have not been willing to accept this basis of settlement," states the foreword to the proposal written by Frank A. Deniston, director of purchases for the relief commission.

Phrasing "Unfortunate."

Asked for an explanation of this statement, which implies that the agreement of the offending companies is necessary for settlement, W. S. Reynolds, executive head of the commission, said that the phrasing was "unfortunate."

What was meant, Mr. Reynolds said, was that the companies objected to the former basis as being unfair to them. The earlier claims were computed on the difference in the contractor's cost of specification coal and his cost of the inferior fuel which was substituted. Mr. Deniston described the later method of evaluating the substitute coal in his statement.

"Prof. David R. Mitchell, assistant professor of mining and metallurgical engineering of the University of Illinois, has established for the commission a schedule of fact as for evaluating coal from the various producing areas from which the substitute fuel was obtained," he states.

Substitute Worth 86 Per Cent.

"In determining these factors, coal as specified in the contracts, which was southern Illinois coal, was used as the standard. The audit schedule of substitute coal has been examined and the average value of the coal . . . was found to be 86 per cent of the value of the specified coal."

Although the commission has added several protective clauses in specifications to guard against a repetition of such substitutions, its coal bill will be $800,000 higher than on the basis of last year's prices unless Washington NRA officials revise the dealers' margin fixed by the Chicago code authorities.

The increased handling charge now is being investigated. An estimated 1,500,000 tons of coal are to be distributed to relief "clients" in Cook county alone, with a like quantity handed out in the other counties.

FARMER FATALLY HURT.

Waukon, Ia., Sept. 23.—[Special.]—Fred Fellberg, 54, Waukon farmer, was fatally injured when a team he was driving on a hay tedder in a soybean field, became frightened and ran away.

BEFORE you decide on that new apartment, be sure to look at the Gas Range. Is it a range that has been Tested and Approved by the Gas Appliance Society? Does it bear the Double Check seal? Has it these modern, up-to-date features which make cooking so easy, and make food taste so good: A big, roomy self-insulated oven; automatic oven heat control; self-lighting top burners; smokeless broiler, and all those other features that are making thousands of Chicago women happier wives and mothers as well as better cooks? Remember—only a gas range bearing the Double Check seal has all these features. So look for that seal on the range in the apartment you rent. When you find it you'll know that you are going to enjoy cooking in that apartment, and your family are going to enjoy their meals.

Fair warning to apartment seekers!

INDICATIONS this fall are that it will be no easy matter to find a desirable apartment. Lack of construction for five years, obsolescence and other factors are fast turning what was once a surplus into a shortage. ●Unless you are entirely satisfied with your present apartment and intend to remain in it, start your search for a new one at once! No longer is it a simple matter of walking a block or two and finding a half-dozen equally desirable places in which to live. Apartment renting this year will be a real job and you will need real help. ●The best way to go about finding your new apartment is to read the Tribune want ad section regularly. In the Apartments-to-Rent columns you will find a comprehensive list of desirable apartments available in practically every neighborhood, and in every price range. Read these offers regularly. Check those which appeal to you and make up a list of them. Then investigate these at your convenience. If you use this method, you will find it a simple matter to locate a desirable apartment.

RUSSIA, JAPAN ARRANGE ACCORD TO SELL RAILWAY

Price Near $50,000,000; Ends Crisis.

TOKIO, Sept. 23.—(AP)—It was officially announced today that Foreign Minister Koki Hirota and Dr. Constantin Yurenev, Russian ambassador, have agreed upon price for transfer of soviet Russia's half share in the Chinese Eastern railway to Manchukuo.

Fundamental conditions of the transfer have also been agreed upon, it was announced, thereby solving an issue which for three years has carried the most dangerous threat of any single factor pointing toward a Russo-Japanese war.

The price was not officially disclosed, but it was learned on excellent authority that Manchukuo will pay 140,000,000 yen [$40,600,000] for the railway, plus discharge allowances for soviet employes estimated at 30,000,000 yen [$8,700,000] additional.

Halves the Difference.

This amount, approximating $50,000,000, halves the difference in the last offers of both sides prior to a deadlock in negotiations reached last month.

It was revealed that Hirota and Yurenev during the last 30 days, under cover of an apparent crisis in Russo-Japanese relations marked by bitter exchanges, protests charges, and recriminations, achieved a compromise in a series of secret meetings.

"Since the deadlock on Aug. 13," said a foreign office spokesman, "a series of unofficial conversations took place, during which we ascertained that an agreement between soviet Russia and Manchukuo was possible through mutal compromises. Therefore we summoned Manchukuo delegates to Tokio to complete the arrangements."

Parley Begins Tomorrow.

Two Manchukuan delegates have already left Hsinking, capital of the new empire, and are due at Tokio Sept. 25 to join a conference on details of the transfer which is expected to open shortly thereafter.

These delegates are Chuchi Ohashi, a Japanese who as vice minister of foreign affairs of the Manchukuo government actually runs the Hsinking foreign office, and Naoshi Hoshino, a high official of the Manchukuo ministry of finance.

Officials hoped to conclude quickly the long drawn out and tortuous negotiations over the railway which began in June of 1933.

Nothing was announced concerning the approximately 80 soviety employés of the railway now languishing in Manchukuo jails, arrested last August for allegedly conspiring against Manchukuan and Japanese officialdom. Well informed persons indicated they would probably be released within a short time and "deported" to Russia.

DICK TRACY—The Note on the Fly Paper

HEY! TRACY! QUICK! COME HERE!
WHAT'S UP, KID?
LOOK AT THAT— DO YOU SEE WHAT IT IS?
LOOKS LIKE A PIECE OF FLY-PAPER. WHAT'S ON IT?
THOSE PIECES OF PAPER STUCK TO IT ARE PARTS OF A TORN-UP LETTER THAT WAS THROWN OUT OF A WINDOW BY THAT WOMAN WHO'S BEEN FOLLOWING ME LATELY.
I WAS SHADOWING HER WHEN SHE WENT TO HER HOTEL. I WATCHED HER WINDOW FROM THE STREET AND SAW HER THROW OUT THOSE PIECES OF PAPER. MOST OF THEM FELL ON THE FLY-PAPER LAYING ON THE WINDOW SILL BELOW HER ROOM.
HM! NOW HOW SHOULD WE BEST GO ABOUT IT TO GET THOSE PIECES OF PAPER OFF THAT FLY-STICKEM?

MISSING GIRL'S FRIENDS DOUBT BODY IS HERS

Three friends of Miss Leona Galzaitis, former secretary of the Lithuanian consulate here, who disappeared on May 24, viewed yesterday the clothing taken from the headless body of a woman found last Thursday near the old Ravinia opera house in Highland Park. Lake county authorities are investigating the possibility that the body might be that of Miss Galzaitis.

The friends who viewed the body are F. P. Bradchulis, an attorney who lives at 3112 South Halsted street, and two women, who refused to give their names, but said they had been classmates of Miss Galzaitis at Valparaiso university in Valparaiso, Ind. Bradchulis asserted the shoes might have belonged to Miss Galzaitis, but that the other clothing appeared to be of a cheaper grade than she was accustomed to wear.

Bradchulis said that Miss Galzaitis had a brother living in Chicago, whose exact address he did not know. He said that her mother once lived at Collinsville, Ill.

Chautemps, Ex-Premier, Is Elected to French Senate

BLOIS, France, Sept. 23.—(AP)—Former Premier Camille Chautemps, storm center of the Stavisky scandal, was elected senator from the department of Loir-et-Cher today after a hot fight. Chautemps failed to get the necessary majority on the first ballot but succeeded on the second.

Day By Day Story of the Experimental Farm By Bob Becker

Life at the Pond.

Sept. 23, 1934.

If the wild ducks now enjoying the pond on THE TRIBUNE auxiliary farm should fly low over the poultry yard where the big Muscovy ducks live and see what has happened there, they would get a real surprise these days. Whereas the wild birds made their trip north in the spring, built nests, raised their broods and now have started their southward migration, with all young ducks able to take care of themselves, a persevering old Muscovy here on the farm has just upset the calendar by coming from her nest with a brood of 20 fuzzy ducklings. Here is September almost ready to give way to October, yet the Muscovies are hatching out eggs just as though it were spring.

Rawlings, who is in charge of the poultry on the auxiliary farm couldn't help laughing when he displayed this bunch of late-September Muscovies the other day. He is expecting a couple of other ducks to get on the scoreboard within a short time. They are incubating clutches of eggs and may come out with more late broods. That's one fine thing about the big Muscovies. They don't mind work. I noticed this summer that they started incubating eggs early in the spring and no sooner did a duck get one family started in life than she turned around and cheerfully took over another clutch of eggs.

After leaving the Muscovies yesterday morning I hiked down to the duck pond, which at this time of the year always is recording the comings and goings of migratory birds. The drouth has reduced the pond until now it is divided into two pools separated by a narrow stretch of dry land. In the larger pool, the mallards, swans and wild geese spend most of their time.

Just as soon as I came close enough to the water I could see a number of strange ducks edging away from the other birds. Their long necks identified them as pintails. Up they went as I approached. I counted nine in the flock, only two of them drakes.

Wild flowers seem to be trying hard to cover up the ugly, dried-mud shoreline which the drouth has caused.

Close to the water one can see the smartweed forming splashes of pink. Behind this flowering weed stands row after row of bright yellow sunflowers. As though this massing of color around the pond were not enough to hide the effects of the drouth, the pale purple and white asters grow tall and luxuriant. Some of these aster plants stand higher than four feet and bear dozens of blossoms. Where the asters stop the bright green foliage of young oaks and the brilliant sumac leaves begin as a border for this area of lowland.

The ducks, geese, and swans like occasionally to leave the larger pool and to walk over to the smaller one. When I walked between these divisions of the pond, I found myself unconsciously paddling along a well beaten path of the birds.

There is only one water bird on the pond which probably does not use this little highway. It is the big blue heron which for many days has been a steady "boarder" at the duck pond. I saw him yesterday walking around in the shallow water, tall and serious. He looked like a sentry for the other birds.

A TRUE STORY

By A Mother

who brings up her four children very differently from grandma's way

Here's a story that covers three generations. Mrs. G. R. Strong, of Clermont, New York, sends us this letter.

"In olden days," she writes, "when my mother was a girl she was a delicate child. She tells me that at nine in the morning she was given a patent medicine for biliousness; at noon she took another for chronic constipation; and at three she took a blood builder. She has often told me people didn't know much about health when she was a girl.

"I often contrast my four fine, healthy youngsters with mother. We don't fill them up with medicines the way people used to in mother's day. Thanks to my doctor's directions we just use Nujol regularly. It has not upset their stomachs, and even when they had whooping cough they only had serum and Nujol.

"I could write a book about Nujol from my fourteen years of married life. My husband's father uses it, too, and at seventy-four he is well and takes long walks.

"The children are Bud, age thirteen; Royal, age ten; Elaine, age nine; and Joyce, age four. All of them, thank goodness, are bright, active, and alert. They are advanced in school, and up to standard in weight and height. They love outdoor sports—hiking, swimming, and so on. We think we're pretty lucky to have discovered such an easy way to keep in good shape.

"You can publish this if you want to—maybe it will help some other families to keep well!"

Nujol, "regular as clockwork" now comes in two forms, plain Nujol and Cream of Nujol, the latter flavored and often preferred by children. You can get it at any drug store.

What is your Nujol story? If you have been using Nujol for ten years or more, if you are bringing up your children on it, tell us. Address Stanco Incorporated, 2 Park Avenue, Department 23-U, New York City.

WHEN YOU'RE TOO TIRED TO GO ON...

Get a LIFT with a Camel!

MISS GEORGIA ENGELHARD has scaled 90 major peaks, 38 in one season, including such giants of the Canadian Rockies as Mt. Victoria, which towers 11,365 feet...and was climbed by Miss Engelhard in record time! Slender, but a marvel of endurance and energy, Georgia Engelhard knows what it means to contend with loose rock and slippery ice...high above the timber line! To an interviewer who recently asked for her secret of maintaining vibrant energy, Miss Engelhard replied: "When people tell me of being tired out, or lacking 'pep,' I don't know of better advice to give than you'll find in the suggestion 'Get a lift with a Camel.'"

SALESMAN, E. W. Davis says: "I'm a salesman—and a steady smoker. I'll say this for Camel's costlier tobaccos—they taste better, and they never get on my nerves. And when I'm tired I enjoy especially the way smoking a Camel revives my energy!"

MOTOR-BOAT RACER, Mrs. Florence Burnham says: "For a long time I have been a Camel fan. Camels, being so much milder, never disturb my nerves so I smoke them all I want."

SIGHTSEER, Carl Johnson says: "Camels helped me at the World's Fair when I was 'all in.' I always smoke a Camel when I feel 'low' or out of 'pep' to bring back my energy."

YOU'LL ENJOY this thrilling response in your flow of energy!

In light of the recent scientific confirmation of the "energizing effect" in Camels, note what Miss Georgia Engelhard, champion woman mountain climber, says:

"Mountain climbing is great sport, but don't try it unless you have plenty of energy. Many times up there above the timber line, within a short climb of the goal, I have thought 'I can't go another step.' Then I call a halt and smoke a Camel. A Camel lifts me up in just a few minutes and gives me the energy to push on."

People in every walk of life have found that Camels increase their energy. Perhaps you have observed this among your own circle of friends. You'll like Camel's matchless blend of costlier tobaccos. Mild—but never flat or "sweetish"—never tiresome in taste. You'll feel like smoking more. And with Camels, you will find that steady smoking does not jangle the nerves.

ANY TOBACCO MAN WILL TELL YOU: "Camels are made from finer, More Expensive Tobaccos—Turkish and Domestic—than any other popular brand."

Camel's Costlier Tobaccos never get on your Nerves!

UPTON SINCLAIR, DEMOCRATIC LEADER.

Upton Sinclair is the Democratic party in California. The state platform recognizes it, and Senator McAdoo, one of the chief Rooseveltian lieutenants, accepts the socialistic doctrines of the candidate as sound Democratic policies. Although Mr. Tugwell has been sent to Italy in accord with the policy of getting the radicals off-stage, Sinclair is in the center of the scene, recognized as a true product of the present day Democratic party, its candidate for governor, and symbol of its intentions. He is not discredited by the California convention nor repudiated. The influential men of the party accept him as their standard bearer, and Sinclair says that his ideas will be the ideas prevailing in the party throughout the country. With Huey Long a true representative of the party in Louisiana and Bilbo in Mississippi, no one can gainsay Sinclair's prediction or his statement, with Mr. McAdoo's approval, that his ideas are in accord with the purposes of the New Deal everywhere.

It is to be observed that Mr. Farley, the soft voice of the party in the campaign, did not think it wise to say a word for the Democratic candidates in Minnesota or to oppose the radical Farmer-Labor candidate, Gov. Floyd Olson. The truth is that the old Democratic party has ceased to exist and its place has been taken by a party whose new doctrines come from Tugwell and Sinclair, which has no conflict with Norman Thomas and the Socialists, and which will be recognized by the American communists as the furthest advance their doctrines have made in American political action.

Sinclair started something in California which exposed the direction of what is still labeled as the Democratic party under its present leadership. When McAdoo submits the revelation is complete and the omens are no longer obscured.

Mr. Sinclair's program is one of government operation of industry and agriculture, with increased income taxation to put it through and a socialistic millennium as its objective. If he could succeed in making an omelet after he has broken his eggs the end of private ownership and enterprise would be in sight in California. The Democratic party accepts this policy and endorses the purpose. Sinclair endeavors to disguise himself and his ideas, but without any success. He entered upon his campaign for nomination as an irresponsible vendor of wild ideas and ended by starting something which neither he nor the responsible members of the party to which he offered himself could stop.

It isn't difficult to release the wild horses. The hard thing is to ride herd on them again. The wild horses are loose in California and the Democratic party accepts responsibility for them. California, with full endorsement, is now the Democratic model for the United States. Sinclair is one of its leaders. His program contains its principles. Sinclair, Long, and Bilbo are Democratic standard bearers and radicalism in every state is behind such Democratic leadership. The people of the country cannot complain that it has not been revealed to them in spite of the intent to reduce their apprehensions.

THE PARADOX OF MRS. OWEN.

Mrs. Ruth Bryan Owen, United States minister to Denmark, has arrived home from Greenland full of indignation that any one should have dared criticize her little journey on the coast guard cutter Champlain. She does not care that the round trip required to carry her from the Danish outposts to New York cost the government $8,140, nor does she repent the tragic consequences of the Champlain's absence from its post of duty when the Morro Castle burst into flames. Each dead passenger on the boat is not a martyr to the junket; she is its only martyr!

This indignation is paradoxical, but it is in character. Mrs. Owen's father, the Great Commoner, was not altogether comprehensible himself, particularly in his later years, when he used his eloquence impartially on salvation and Florida real estate. Then Mrs. Owen has always been something of a paradox. She is opposed to gambling, yet she maintains her home within gunshot of a Miami horse racing establishment. She claimed to be an ardent moralist, yet she represented a district in congress given over to bootlegging, drunkenness, and vice, and did nothing to reform it.

Mrs. Owen could not have known that the Morro Castle was going to burn and no one doubts that she meant no harm in asking for the use of the Champlain. She cannot be blamed too severely for having taken the cutter, but she should be blamed for trying to make it appear that criticism of her junket, in view of the Morro Castle fire, is unjust. She must have realized something of the instability of her position when reporters asked her about the sea trip, for she quickly changed the subject. She told them there was a great bond of sympathy between her and the Danish people. This is fortunate, because at present the bond of sympathy between Mrs. Owen and the American people is slight.

GOOD NEWS FOR FARMERS.

Farmers who know where their true interest lies will welcome the decision of Judge Chesnut in the federal District court in Baltimore finding the Frazier-Lemke act unconstitutional. That law, enacted by the last congress, permits a virtual moratorium on interest and a revaluation of the principal of farm mortgage loans. With such a statute on the books few lenders can be found to advance money to farmers. The law has added to the normal risk attending any loan an additional hazard of confiscation which few lenders will accept.

If the finding of Judge Chesnut is sustained, farm loans can become a prime security once more. Then a man who wants to buy a farm can hope to borrow the money he lacks. Then a farmer who wishes to improve his property can reasonably expect to obtain the credit he requires. Then it should be relatively easy for one of a number of hairs to a farm to borrow the money to buy the shares of the other heirs.

Some short-sighted farmers may think that they can always turn to the government for credit, as many of them are doing today. No one who has been reading the financial pages of the newspapers in recent weeks can place much reliance upon that source of loans. The government's farm mortgage bonds have been selling below par and the government bond market as a whole has displayed a sinking tendency. The growing debt of the federal government forecasts further difficulties in obtaining fresh credits to lend on farm security. The time is coming when farmers must rely upon the ordinary sources for their loans, and when that time comes the Frazier-Lemke act, if it is sustained, will virtually cut off all long term credit on farm security.

No one who hopes to realize a fair price for his property can regard such a situation with anything but alarm. If farms must be sold for cash, the number of buyers will be greatly lessened because not everybody who would like to buy a farm has the money to pay for it. The Frazier-Lemke act, if Judge Chesnut is reversed, will destroy farm values.

If this law is good for the farmers, the chinch-bug is a benefactor.

LITTLE AMERICAN HITLERS.

Printers conducting their business under the graphic arts code have been digesting the warning given them by S. F. Beatty, code authority executive, that complaints against the code carried to the newspapers will automatically turn their cases over to the United States government "for handling." In this connection Mr. Beatty invited the printers to study the penalty clauses of the code, the fines and imprisonment. The intimation was that if complaining printers got into the newspapers they might later get into jail in direct consequence of the publicity they sought.

If there are no publicly aired complaints this code, along with others, will seem to be working in accordance with the prospectus of recovery. The administrators have not been able to find a press gag although the chief code authorities, including Gen. Johnson and Mr. Roosevelt himself, long balked at accepting the free press reservation in the publication codes.

Intimidation of code signers is an indirect attempt at suppression, approaching the source of news and giving dissatisfied persons to understand that they jeopardize their business and themselves if they make their grievances known. It is against the nature of government control to accept criticism and publicity. Control means complete authority. Criticism means insubordination, an attempt to escape complete authority. In an all powerful state Hitler is not an abnormality. He is inevitable.

Editorial of the Day

[New York Times.]

For years there has been a great flow of passionate oratory in congress and out of it about the arrogance and lawlessness of capital. The country is now privileged to witness the moderation, the attachment to law and respect for the rights of others, manifested by the leaders of a great labor organization. Mr. Gorman, chairman of the special strike committee of the United Textile Workers of America, will not consent to arbitration should that be recommended by Mr. Roosevelt's mediation board, until "after we have closed all the mills." His respect for law is demonstrated by the flying squadrons engaged in shutting up mills and bulldozing operatives who want to work.

Mr. Gorman is "deeply concerned" about violence when it is resorted to by the state or the National Guard. To execute the law and try to prevent or control disorder is violence. To break the law is among the rights of labor. Lest the public should be deceived by appearances and its thinking confused, Mr. Gorman has been good enough to make this magnanimous offer:

> If the President will bring about agreement among the governors that our members shall be deputized to enforce law, there will be law enforcement. There will not be another single episode of violence, because we will see to it that those officials who have been guilty of killings are kept in bounds and under control.

The lawful officers of the law are to be superseded by representatives of breakers of the law. These are to enforce against them the higher law, the law that transcends the statute books, "law" made by strikers for strikers. How pleasant it would be for mere burglars and murderers if they could possess such a "right" or prerogative. In the way of megalomaniac folly it would be hard to go further than Mr. Gorman goes. His proposal would be comic if it were not made tragic by the spectacle of voluntary and forced unemployment, accompanied with riot and local civil wars. These are the contributions of Mr. Gorman and his associates to national recovery.

What do temperate labor leaders and organized labor in general think of these preposterous theories? Never yet have invitations to disorder failed to injure labor.

THE FREQUENT METHOD.

A Negro mammy had a family of well behaved boys. One day her mistress asked:

"Ah'll tell you, missus," answered Sally. "Ah raise dem wid a barrel stave and Ah raise 'em frequently!"—Exchange.

A LINE O' TYPE OR TWO

How to the Line, let the quips fall where they may.

AND IT'S WORTH KNOWING.

But is it worth while Going places?

People who ask you about
It yawn when you tell 'em,
And then they say: "Yes, one sees a lot
Of country, but, shucks! there isn't much kick
In that. It all looks alike,
Just fields and trees and barbed wire
Fences and more gas stations and trucks and
More small towns that look just like the other Small towns you passed through
That morning."

And maybe they're Right.

I glanced at the morning paper
Given me by the peroxide waitress at
The restaurant where I had the discouraged
Looking orange, the cold soft boiled eggs, and the Burnt toast and coffee for Breakfast.
And I looked over the front
And the stickups and machine gun
Raids on business offices and all about
The beasts who tortured an old man to make Him tell where he had hidden that Fifteen dollars and
Seventy-five cents.
And I read about strikes and lockouts
And the fights between the guards at
The mills and the strikers and the People thumped on the head
And the tear gas bombs and so on, and I read of
All the people who are on government relief
And the prospects of a long, hard winter
Ahead, and after that
I didn't much care whether I
Kept on driving along to where I was going or Went back to where I Came from.

But I finally landed somewhat
Gloomily by the side of
The sad sea waves,
And I sat on the sand and looked out
Over the sea and listened to the sobbing of
The waves on the beach.
And, remembering a few things, I knew
Why the waves were sobbing.
They were weeping because it's
Such a mean, dismal old world.
And then an angel appeared,
If angels are sometimes red headed
And are freckle faced and have an Irish
Smile and go barefoot and hold a pair
Of old pants up by one suspender.
The angel didn't exactly have wings or a
Golden harp, but instead he held out a bluefish
About half as big as he was.
The angel said
That his Uncle Bill had caught it just that Morning and he had noticed the Illinois license
On our car when we drove past his Cottage over there and Uncle
Bill allowed that people from Away out west were all crazy
For sea food when they got to Nantucket
And so had sent over the bluefish for
Our lunch and if we didn't know how to cook
Bluefish, then, said the angel, his Aunt Kate
Would come over and cook it
For us.
Somehow the world seemed to be
A lot nicer place than
I had thought, and I listened
Some more and the waves weren't sobbing
As they broke on the yellow sand down
On the shore.
They were chuckling.

And come to think of it,
Lots of things like that kept Happening.
The one that seemed most surprising was
The one of the fat bus driver.
It was most surprising because I have never Liked bus drivers. They go zooming along
Not seeming to pay attention to Anything else,
And their big buses look as big as a small Town county courthouse, and when I see them
Coming I feel as though I ought to Drive my car through a fence and Get over into a plowed field to give the bus room
Enough to get past.

I tried to do a short cut on Highway 6
In Pennsylvania. The map showed A grand road from Farmer's Valley to Warren,
Which was back on Route 6.
I drove and drove and drove, but kept
Coming back to Custer City.
I have nothing against Custer City,
It's a very nice little town.
But after coming back to it a half dozen times
I began to get a little bored and somewhat
Disgusted with Custer City.
And while I was asking a boy fishing
From a bridge how to get away
From Custer City and over to Warren
A big bus came tooling along full of Passengers, and the bus man stopped and Poked his head out and said: "Go back
On this same road you're on and take the second Road left and keep on it until you come to Another road by a graveyard with a little Schoolhouse close by and you turn left again
And keep goin' till you hit
Warren."
So we did as the bus man said and
Got to the graveyard and the schoolhouse,
But the roads seem to mix up and go all sorts
Of ways, and I turned off on what I thought
Was the right road, and then there was an awful
Tooting back of me and a lot of shouts and Cries and I thought a cyclone or something
Was coming, and I pulled over to the side of the Road to let it go past.
But it was the fat bus driver and his bus
And his passengers and they were all Shouting to tell me I had Taken the wrong road.
And the fat bus man stopped and got out
And came over and said he had Told me to take the left road
And I had taken the road on the Right, and he said to put out my Hand and I did and he picked up a stick and Slapped me over the knuckles and said, "Now
Listen to teacher and this time
Get it right," and he told me all over again and Gave me a map and marked in lead pencil
Just which way I was to turn.
And he pointed to a road and he said, "Now,
That's your road and you get it and you
Keep it! You hear me!
And if I catch you off of it again
Papa spank."
And he waited with his big bus
Until I had turned around and got
On the right road, and then
He gave three happy toots
On the horn and his passengers gave three Cheers and we traveled on Straight into Warren and good Old Route 6.

Which gets me back to where
I started, that in touring
Around in an auto you're bound
To discover that this is a Pretty good old world
After all.

How to Keep Well By Dr. Irving S. Cutter

To the limit of space questions pertaining to hygiene and prevention of disease will be answered in this column. Personal replies will be made to inquiries, under proper limitations, when return stamped envelope is inclosed. Dr. Cutter will not make diagnoses or prescribe for individual disease.

WHY INFANTS SOMETIMES VOMIT.

THERE is a condition peculiar to infants in which the child fails to gain in weight normally and in which vomiting is a prominent symptom. The material vomited is food or mucus, or both, and occasionally contains traces of blood. This probably means that there is some obstruction at the outlet of the stomach, and experience has shown that it is frequently due to a spasm of the muscle fibers. The condition is called pylorospasm or pyloric stenosis, and calls for the most careful and critical watching and management.

The onset is usually between the second and the fourth week of life. One characteristic of the vomiting is that it takes place rather promptly after feeding and may even occur while the baby is at the breast. There is no lack of appetite on the part of the child, and there is little if any fever. Sometimes, because of the poor nutrition which quickly follows this persistent vomiting, waves of stomach contraction passing across the abdomen may be likened to a ball passing from left to right under the skin.

The diagnosis is not difficult. The vomiting, the loss of weight, and the haggard appearance of the child are sufficient to call for prompt medical intervention.

The treatment consists in using some anti-spasmodic drug, such as belladonna, accompanied by breast feeding, thick cereal feeding, or both. This should be tried only when the child shows sufficient reserve to warrant postponing operative procedure in order to try the feeding experiment. Efforts to correct the condition through special feeding are most successful when breast milk is a part of the program. Sometimes small amounts of food material will pass the stomach outlet but not sufficient to nourish the child adequately.

When a definite diagnosis of closure of the stomach outlet has been made, parents will usually be advised by the physician that a dietary regime will be attempted first, that the child will have to be carefully watched, and if he is not doing well an operation may be necessary. No one can prophesy which child will respond to the diet and which will require operation.

The physician will provide prompt replacement of the water lost by the tissues through the use of normal salt solution. If the diet treatment promises to be successful the first indication will usually be a decrease in the amount of vomited material and an increase in the amount of material voided by the bowel. The lack of water must be combated constantly either by continuing the injection of normal salt solution under the skin or by passing water into the lower bowel.

In attempting the treatment by diet there comes a critical time when, with no increase in excretion from the bowel and with continued vomiting, decision must be made in favor of operation.

The procedure devised by Rammstedt is simple and quick. It consists in spreading the muscle fibers of the stomach outlet. This must be carried out under gas anesthesia. There is little bleeding and the abdominal wound is quickly closed. The wound through the muscle fibers of the stomach is not stitched. As a result the child recovers quickly and water is usually given by mouth two or three hours after operation, and diluted breast milk three or four hours later. Within three or four days the child is able to nurse at the breast. The feedings, of course, must be small at first.

The operation has a low mortality and may be considered one of the life saving milestones in surgical progress.

A GOOD METHOD.

A. E. E. writes: Some years ago we had a very heavy incidence of athlete's foot, especially among the boys in our physical education classes. Two years ago we took positive steps to eliminate the condition. We built a large foot bath and placed it at the entrance to the shower room. Every boy taking a shower had to walk through this foot bath, which was filled with a solution made with water and chlorozene tablets. During the last year we have checked rigorously each month for the presence of ringworm. At most of these checkups only one or two cases have been evident. We have over 600 high school boys and about 100 junior college men taking physical education, so that I think our method has come as close as is humanly possible to eliminating this trouble.

REPLY.

A thoroughly satisfactory procedure.

TOO MANY CIGARETS.

Mrs. E. C. T. writes: My husband, aged 35, smokes two to three packages of cigarets a day and would like to control the habit. Do you have any formula that might help?

He is extremely nervous and irritable, has lost weight, and has constant cough, headaches, and deafness.

REPLY.

Gum chewing has been resorted to by some with good results. A nervous, underweight individual may be helped by increasing his weight through the use of more food, eating between meals, and longer hours of sleep. There is an old saying that is a good one, "Pad tired nerves with fat." We have leaflets on curing the tobacco and the cigaret habit. Send a stamped and addressed envelope for these.

DRY COUGH.

H. F. writes: What could be the cause of a dry cough, but with much clearing of the throat, in a girl of 15?

REPLY.

Laryngitis, bronchitis, and tuberculosis should be investigated. Sometimes a dry cough is due to improper functioning of the heart.

TRUST FUND.

Chicago, Sept. 15.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—My husband's uncle and aunt [who lived in New York] some years ago arranged a trust fund, providing $100 per month for us. The uncle died three years ago and my husband died lately. We received this money regularly until he died. Since then I have been left without anything. I was led to believe that I would share in case of his death. The aunt is still alive. I would appreciate your advice. A. S.

Your rights depend upon the wording of the instrument creating the trust. We suggest that you ask the trustee to send you a copy of the instrument if you do not have a copy. TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

GARNISHMENT.

Chicago, Sept. 15.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—1. Can wages be garnisheed without a court order? 2. I mean by this, whether any one has the right to go to your employer and demand that check be stopped and not given to you unless you agree to make some payment each week? 3. If wages are garnisheed does the employer receive an order to do so, or are there court proceedings on the matter? 4. Can wages be garnisheed if one makes less than $20 a week? 5. Is there such a statute that wages cannot be garnisheed if the salary earned is less than $20 a week and the party is the sole support of a family? 6. If one should file bankruptcy and continues working has the party any chance any time hereafter to garnishee his wages? E. C.

1. No. The proper procedure is first to secure judgment against the debtor and then follow it up with the demand notice and garnishment proceedings.

2. The service of a demand notice in advance of securing judgment against the debtor is improper, and if a lawyer is concerned he should be reported to the bar association, 160 North La Salle street.

3. See 1.

4. The exemption to the head of a family is $20 per week.

5. See 4.

6. Of course he can try, but the bankruptcy will be a defense.

FROM ACROSS THE SEA

BY JOHN STEELE.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON.—Commercial aviation in the United Kingdom and the British empire last year, the subject of a report published by the air ministry, showed striking developments.

The Imperial Airways' increase of business is seen by comparison with the previous year:

	Passengers.	Tons freight.
1932	45,150	770

On the subsidized regular European services the total mileage flown was 762,940, or 105,530 more than in 1932.

During the summer about 1,000 five or six course meals were served in the air on the London-continental services. On British internal services [in which Imperial Airways were not engaged] 22,017 passengers and 30,782 pounds of freight were carried last year. The air license position was:

Current on Dec. 31—	1931.	1932.	1933.
Pilots "A"	2,091	2,397	2,611
Pilots "B"	315	369	441
Navigators	88	86	106
Ground engineers	1,156	1,221	1,153
Aircraft certificates of airworthiness	951	1,015	1,049

At the end of the year there were forty public-use airdromes and 201 private-use airdromes. The increase in the number of privately owned airplanes is very gradual, and the report bears witness to the fact that there is far more rapid development in air lines and the passengers and goods carried on them. The number of privately owned aircraft on the register last year was only 408, or 6 more than in 1932 and 23 more than in 1931.

Of a total of 67 accidents in the year, 18 were of a serious nature, resulting in a total of 11 deaths. The causes, in the opinion of the inspector of accidents, were errors of judgment and faulty airmanship in 38 of these accidents. Engine failures contributed to one fatal and five minor crashes. As far as is known, there were no cases of structural failure during the period under review, but one accident was due to faulty maintenance.

The value of goods exported from and imported into Great Britain by air in 1933 was $10,570,515, or $245,230 less than in 1932. Bullion and specie carried increased from $125,194,005 to $235,192,835.

Efficiency, in terms of journeys completed, on Imperial Airways lines is impressive.

	1933, per cent.	1932, per cent.
European [excluding London-Egypt]	99.2	98.8
London-Egypt	100	100
Egypt-India-Singapore	99.9	100
Egypt-South Africa	100	100

Total membership of the eighteen flying clubs subsidized by the government was 4,931, an increase of 302.

Croydon airport's attraction as a show place is shown by the fact that last year 71,230 visitors were conducted over the port by official guides, an increase of 21.6 per cent.

A DOCTOR LOOKS AT NEW DEAL.

Evanston, Ill., Sept. 20.—If my professional contact with business men is any criterion, the vast majority of responsible executives are decidedly against the principles of our new deal and its radical measures, codes, huge governmental expenditures, and other socialistic moves. On the other hand, educators and a fair proportion of the salaried class, who never need gamble their future financial security through business investment and similar individualistic moves, with its cold and practical responsibilities, are inclined to favor a change from the old order to a modern Utopia.

A physician sees human nature at its best and at its worst. It is as impossible radically to change human nature and that which governs it any more than the elements of nature itself can be changed. No task seems too great for these modern Don Quixotes of the brain trust. They would harness nature to a wheel with their power dams and control her plant growth by despoiling her produce. They would control each and every enterprise to such an extent that its inherent incentive is so destroyed as to render that enterprise drab and tedious to those responsible for its success.

Collectivized hysteria moves the vast unthinking mass who through a labor government are demanding more and more power from a public already despoiled of many of its constitutional rights. The whole scheme of federal control seems not such an illogical, harebrained child as we first supposed, but was planned and has resulted in a bloodless revolution that has so destroyed capitalism as already to have thrown our United States into a controled panic and a slough of further depression, still somewhat camouflaged by an inflation far more advanced than the public realizes.

It is resulting already, as Al Smith warned us over a year ago, in substituting "our American birthright for a mess-pot of communistic pottage."

EVANSTON PHYSICIAN.

WHO'S AFRAID?

Chicago, Sept. 18.—While the government is drafting codes for all classes of employers and employés, why not a code for the proverbial wolf at the door? Reducing the working hours of the wolf might help to bring about some of the peace and contentment promised. This would provide employment for more wolves and give the householder the pleasure of a little diversification and change of scenery by at least looking into the face of a different wolf occasionally. D. J. COURSEY.

AFTER THE FAIR.

Chicago, Sept. 18.—I would suggest that the present fair grounds be changed to the "Garden o' the Lakes" after the Fair is over. A charge for admission could be 35 cents for the upkeep of the place. Leave some of the buildings, the fountains, and various other beauty spots already there. People love to go somewhere and this would be an ideal place for Chicago's Garden o' the Lakes.

ALMA W.

QUESTION.

Chicago, Sept. 19.—When will the New Dealers celebrate Unconstitutional day? [Or are they staging it every day?]

L. J. K.

THE PERILS OF BEING A CARTOONIST.

Chicago, Sept. 20.—The cartoon on the front page of THE TRIBUNE for Sept. 20 shows, among other things, "the Gloomy Dean" prancing merrily down the steps of St. Paul's cathedral in London. This is an unfortunate anachronism. The fact of the matter is that Dean Inge has retired from the cathedral chapter. He preached his farewell sermon on Sept. 9 and has gone to the country to spend his remaining years. He is 74 years old, quite lame, and almost stone deaf. He has been succeeded by Dr. W. R. Matthews, formerly dean of Exeter cathedral, a low churchman, as Dean Inge was.

CHARLES HENRY MITCHELL.

Knox, Ind., Sept. 20.—Mr. McCutcheon, I'm surprised at you. How could Nelson wave both arms when he had but one? [MRS.] LILIAN DUNBY.

PENALIZED FOR PAYING TAXES.

Forest Park, Ill., Sept. 12.—As I understand it, all those who paid their taxes in full will not get the benefit of the 15 per cent reduction, and now that another 5 per cent is coming up they will not get the benefit of that either.

I have been out of work for two years and by working a day or two a week I was able to scrape up enough money to pay my tax bill. I paid in full because I was afraid that if I paid in two instalments I might not have the money to pay the second instalment.

I have not seen a show in two years. I have no clothes to wear. But I saved my nickels to pay taxes. They should give the benefit of the reduction to those who paid and not to those who did not pay. They discriminate against those citizens who paid, and helped the government along and in favor of those who did not pay and sent the city up against the wall. It is not fair.

BENEDET FAVET.

THE CONSEQUENCES.

Chicago, Sept. 21.—I am in the real estate loan business and have urged all of our clients to pay their taxes in full and am now being blamed for having done so. Unless something is done to reimburse these people for the amount they are entitled to or arrangements are made to allow this amount to be credited on their next tax payment each and every one of these parties will file a protest and pay nothing on their taxes. This will put the tax situation in a worse muddle than it has been heretofore.

PHILIP C. KESSLER.

HEEL WRECKERS.

Chicago, Sept. 18.—Will you kindly tell me why the elevated has those narrow wooden ridges with space between just exactly the correct size to fit the heel of your pump and tear off your heel or at least take the cap and trip you when you enter or leave the car? Within two years I have had many heels broken and on an average of once or twice a week a cap taken off. Can this be corrected? MARGE LALLY.

OMENS.

Chicago, Sept. 19.—Omens and omens! Mr. Roosevelt went to see his Harvard crew race, and lost. Mr. Roosevelt went to see his billionaire friend's yacht race, and lost. When he wasn't around, Rainbow won.

Omens and omens!. OMEN.

Onwentsia Golf Players to See Selves in Movie

Women to Attend Autumn Powwow Tomorrow.

BY JUDITH CASS.

MORE than one young Lake Forest matron is going to see herself in the movies for the first time tomorrow afternoon at the Onwentsia club. Celebrating their annual autumn powwow, the club's woman golfers are planning to devote the day to eighteen holes of golf climaxed by the premiere of a movie that shows most of them in action.

Interested in making the 1934 powwow an especially gala affair, the woman's golf committee, with Mrs. W. Paul McBride as chairman, has been at work most of the summer filming members at play, sometimes in good form and sometimes not such good form. Aside from the movies the day's program will be generally patterned after last year's powwow.

More than 75 are expected to enter in the morning competition. Then there will be luncheon at the clubhouse for the players and also those who have been spectators.

Prizes to Be Awarded in the Afternoon.

In the afternoon will come the announcement of the prize winners—Mrs. Charles Dennehy took the first award last year for the low gross score on 18 holes—some burlesque events, and the movies.

Best of all the funny events will be the monkey golf contest in which four players take turns hitting a ball. Because the time elapsed counts against the contestants as well as the strokes, the competition is little less than a mad scramble.

Mrs. Donald B. Douglas is Onwentsia's woman's champion this year so she is certain to be a strong contender in the morning's play. Last year the entrants in the morning contest included all ages from a grandmother, albeit a very young one, Mrs. Harris Brewer, to a subdeb, Jane Brooks.

Assisting Mrs. McBride on the woman's golf committee are Mrs. George F. McLaughlin, Mrs. Mason Phelps, and Mrs. Dexter Cummings.

George Harrison Ennis to Wed Omaha Girl.

The engagement of one of society's eligible young men is relayed this morning from Omaha, Neb., where Dr. and Mrs. B. J. Brinkema are making known the betrothal of their daughter, Bernice, to George Harrison Ennis, son of Mrs. William S. Ennis of 2600 Lake View avenue. The announcement is the culmination of a school romance, for it was at the University of Illinois that Miss Brinkema and Mr. Ennis met and there that their friendship developed.

Mr. Ennis, who cruised around the world this summer, has just returned for his junior year at the university. Miss Brinkema will not be there this winter, however, for she has chosen to stay at home instead and assemble a trousseau. The date of the wedding has not been set.

Mr. Ennis' sister, Margaret, is still out west having an especially interesting time in and around the Indian reservations of New Mexico. Right now she is with an archæological expedition that is supervised by Vassar college, where she was graduated. This week she will be leaving this, however, and motoring back north to the Tepee Lodge in Wyoming's Big Horn country, where she spent some of the early summer. It will be October before she is home again.

Another engagement this morning concerns a Chicago bachelor. Mrs. Herbert St. John Webb of Montclair, N. J., announces the betrothal of her daughter, Susanne, to Lawrence Perry Baldwin of Chicago, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles E. Baldwin of Canaan, N. H. Miss Webb attended Rosemary hall, Miss Wright's school at Bryn Mawr, and Sarah Lawrence college. She is an active member of the Montclair Junior league. Mr. Baldwin, a graduate of the Westminster school and Harvard university, is in business in Chicago. The wedding is to take place in November.

Dorothy Schmidt Faces Busy Weeks.

Life is just one round of parties for Miss Dorothy Schmidt, the charming and distinguished daughter of Mrs. Frederick M. Schmidt, between now and Oct. 6. That afternoon at 4:30 o'clock in her mother's apartment at 222 East Delaware place she will become the bride of Otto Teegen of New York City, son of Mrs. Otto Teegen of Davenport, Ia.

Dr. Dudley Stark of St. Chrysostom's Episcopal church is to read the service before only the immediate families, but there is to be a reception afterwards for the many friends who will want to wish Mr. Teegen and his bride unbounded happiness. Little Jina Safford, the daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Frederick R. Schmidt and a niece of Miss Schmidt, is to be her only attendant. Atherton Loring Jr. of Boston is to be Mr. Teegen's best man.

Round of Parties to Start Saturday.

Mr. Loring with Mrs. Loring is arriving Oct. 4, so they will be here for at least a few of the many pre-nuptial events. The day before the wedding will mark the arrival of Mrs. Teegen from Davenport, also that of Mrs. Charles P. Lenaghan, a sister of Mr. Teegen, of Davenport.

The Alfred Wolfes will give a cocktail party for Miss Schmidt at home next Saturday. On Oct. 2, the day Mr. Teegen arrives from New York, there will be a shower "strictly in his honor" given by Mr. and Mrs. Maurice Patrick Geraghty. Those who have received invitations to this affair are now trying to decide with what they will shower a bridegroom.

After the Geraghty party, which is to be at the cocktail hour, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas L. Underwood will give a dinner party for Miss Schmidt and Mr. Teegen. The next afternoon the

MRS. W. IRVING OSBORNE JR. and her mother, Mrs. A. Watson Armour, are not the only mother and daughter working on the committee in charge of St. Luke's fashion show, but they were the only ones present at the first fall meeting and luncheon held at the Fortnightly last Wednesday.

Mrs. Osborne [Elsa Armour] is in charge of obtaining the corps of young women who will sell cigarets at the benefit to be held the afternoon and evening of Oct. 23 at the Stevens hotel. Mrs. Armour is second vice president of the woman's board and chairman of exhibitors for the show.

Among other mother and daughter combinations who are serving on the committee are Mrs. J. Ogden Armour and Mrs. John J. Mitchell [Lolita Armour], Mrs. Walter B. Wolf and Mrs. Walter F. McLallen III. [Ghita Watson], Mrs. Chauncey B. Borland and Miss Hariet Borland, Mrs. William L. Hodgkins and Mrs. Press Hodgkins, and Mrs. Charles H. Morse and Mrs. William S. Covington [Elizabeth Morse].

Gann is an old mountaineer who had never learned to read or write. One day Bob Stearns, owner of a coal company, met him on the street and asked what he was doing these days.

"I'm preachin'," answered Brother Gann.

"Preaching!" exclaimed Mr. Stearns. "Why, Charlie Gann, how can you preach when you can't read or write? You don't know whether the Bible is upside down, frontwards or backwards. How do you do it?"

Brother Gann shrugged, spat twenty feet, and replied: "It's easy. I just go thar to the church house, march up on the platform, slam the Good Book on the pulpit, open her up, and then I gives 'em hell from Geneesus to Revultions."

"Opera Circus" on 3 Revolving Stages Thrills New York

New York, Sept. 23.—(AP)—An extravaganza—the largest since the Hippodrome's mammoth spectacles—transformed the Center theater in Rockefeller Center last night from a movie house into a legitimate theater. The attraction was an operetta, "The Great Waltz," and its premiere was witnessed by 3,700, many of them stage, cinema, and political celebrities.

The opening of the Center as a legitimate house is the first major move, predicted three years ago, in the transfer of New York's theatrical district from Broadway to 6th avenue. Just one block away is the Music hall, the city's largest movie theater, which seats 5,500.

"The Great Waltz," produced by Max Gordon, was presented on three revolving stages with a chorus of 100, ballet of 40, a cast of 42 principals, orchestra of 53, and stage crew of 90. The show employs more than 500 persons.

Billed as a hit that played 607 performances during its run in London, "The Great Waltz" was a tuneful and eye-filling "opera circus," telling the story of the famous Viennese composers, the Johann Strausses, father and son. Many of the best known Strauss waltzes were incorporated in the score.

Guy Robertson and Marion Claire have the two leading rôles. And the producer imported Marie Burke, British actress, and Danilova, Russian ballet dancer, for other parts.

Good Morning!

If ever a picture left you with a bad taste in your mouth, it's "Crime Without Passion!"

An unusual photoplay, a brilliantly, eccentrically executed one, it is the psychological study of a "great mouthpiece," who, after years of saving unworthies from the chair, becomes caught in the toils of his own shrewd, conscious weaving.

Erroneously believing himself guilty of one murder—without witnesses—Lee Gentry commits another. This is done before a roomful of observers. It is the result of his discovery that two of those present know something that would shatter the perfect alibi he has built up.

Claude Rains, of Theater Guild fame and later distinguished as the "invisible man" in the movie of that name, interprets Gentry with cunning and "difference."

For once you contemplate a "mouthpiece" for whom you entertain no sneaking fondness. With one of the characters of the piece you yearn to "smack the smirk off his face." You hate him with a good, healthy hate as he breaks the heart of a brunette of whom he's tired, that he may enjoy undisturbed the embraces of a blonde he loves to madness.

When his trouble descends upon him you are callous toward the man personally. Your only reaction is curiosity to see how this physician is going to heal himself.

Mr. Rains is perfectly ruthless about destroying sympathy for himself. He was concerned only with portraying a skunk as a skunk.

I was impressed with Margo—the new "find." She plays the wronged brunette with vividness, warmth, and abandon. There's a rich commonness about her that suggests brown loam, sun warmed and ready for planting.

Other players are excellent. Note the brief appearance of Helen Hayes and the co-authors, Miss Hayes' husband, Charles MacArthur, and Ben Hecht. The last represent reporters.

Direction and photography, of the impressionistic school, are effective.

I can't picture "Crime Without Passion" as any great box office success—but those who like it will like it immensely.

Ford Pays 27-Word Tribute to McGuffey at Monument Rite

Washington, Pa., Sept. 23.—(AP)—The memory of William Holmes McGuffey, whose "readers" were studied years ago by a vanished generation of American schoolboys, was honored today by Henry Ford, the industrialist. Ford, accompanied by his wife, visited the hillside farm where McGuffey was born 134 years ago today and spoke at the dedication of a granite monument to the "father of American educators."

The automobile manufacturer, who has spent $100,000 or more recreating the birthplace with original logs and furniture in his Greenfield [Mich.] old American village, used twenty-seven words in one of his few public addresses.

"I am glad to join you today in giving honor to Dr. McGuffey. He was a great American. The McGuffey readers taught industry and morality to America," he said.

A fourteen ton monument of stone, set on the side of the McGuffey fireplace, was formally dedicated by Andrew H. Hepburn of Indianapolis, a great-grandson of Dr. McGuffey, and one of thirty-five descendants present.

Forum of Club Presidents Holds First Meeting Today

The Forum of Club Presidents, comprising past and present heads of Catholic clubs affiliated with the Illinois Federation of Women's Clubs, will hold its first meeting of the season at 10:30 o'clock this morning at 31 East Congress street.

Silver and Blue for Evening

From a Chicago shop. Rippled, blistered silver, and blue metal cloth fashions one of the most beautiful of new evening gowns. Deeply flounced and slit, showing the high heeled scarlet slippers, it achieves a rich simplicity because of the bias cut and carefully fitted seams. [TRIBUNE Studio Photo.]

Stylists Work Wizardry with the New Lames

BY RHEA SEEGER.

What these textile wizards have done to lamé or metal cloth will make every one sit up and take a look. It used to be just a matter of metal cloth depending upon an almost unbelievable liquid sheen for beauty. Now it's all different. There are as many varying textures, patterns or designs as if the stuff were silk or trick weaves of satin. For instance, you can find a ripply, blistery effect in very thin lamé that looks exactly like blistered silk crêpe. Or you can find striped loveliness in jewel-like colors against either silver or gold.

The silver tissues or the same stuff in silver gilt are as soft as chiffon. Dresses, or rather evening creations, of this thin tissue are breath-takingly beautiful. Yellow gold, a lovely tarnished silver or gold, in dull or bright effects, woven with coal black threads or with dead white present another manner of getting back to the shining splendor of fashion.

The newest stuff you can find is the moiré metal cloth in gold, that features the opulently rich moiré whorls against a crinkled texture. It looks heavy and rich but is amazingly easy to cut and fashion as well as drape. Most of the best looking metal evening gowns are cut and seamed on the bias, like the suavely smooth satin successes. Most of them are flounced, and slit to show very decorative and gayly colored dancing slippers.

Such a picturesque and sparkling evening gown is illustrated in the fashion photograph. The metal cloth is thin, supple, cut on the bias, and shot with pale sapphire blue. A huge, diamond shaped rhinestone buckle fastens the belt at the normal waistline. Scarlet slippers with silver heels are worn with this scintillating new evening gown from a Chicago shop, showing equally fascinating formal splendor in other creations.

Campion Mothers' Club.

The Campion Mothers' club will hold a business meeting and luncheon at 12:30 o'clock today in Mandel's oak room. The Rev. Peter Brooks, S. J., and the Rev. J. C. Friedl, S. J., will be the speakers.

Open Special Gifts Drive Tomorrow for Half of $3,000,000 Community Fund

Two hundred Chicagoans, representative of business, industrial, and professional life, will meet at the Chicago club tonight to open the special gifts drive which is held preliminary to the annual Community fund cahmpaign. The 1934 fund opens officially to the public on Oct. 1.

The special gifts division, it is expected, will raise about half of the $3,000,000 which the fund is seeking this year for the partial support of 126 recognized welfare agencies in Chicago. The fund aid represents the money needed beyond the income from endowments, annual gifts from regular supporters and occasional benefits among the individual agencies.

Most of those who will attend the dinner will serve on the committee.

Fred A. Preston, general chairman of the campaign, will preside and the speakers will be Edward L. Ryerson Jr., president of the fund; Samuel A. Goldsmith, executive director of the Jewish Charities, and Clarence B. Randall, chairman of the trades and industries division of the campaign.

The fund headquarters at 111 West Washington street announced the following well known business men who will act as captains of special gifts groups. They are Max Adler, Lester Armour, W. O. Batchelder, Dudley Cates, Kent S. Clow, Dexter Cummings, Fred A. Cuscaden, Albert D. Farwell, Irving S. Florsheim, Stephen Y. Hord, John J. Abbott, Joseph E. Magnus, John C. Mechem, Frederick L. McNally, Joseph E. Otis Jr., Holman D. Pettibone, P. S. Russell, Modie J. Spiegel Sr., and Lawrence Williams.

A statement of the 1933 campaign made public yesterday by the fund officials shows the total amount raised during the year to be $2,970,546. This money was contributed by the following sources:

2725 suberiptions from individuals	$ 702,422	23.65%
1813 subscriptions from firms and corporations	1,375,701	46.31%
1098 subscriptions from employé groups	859,337	28.93%
103 miscellaneous subscriptions	33,086	1.11%
Total	$2,970,546	100.00%

The subscriptions of the 1,098 employé groups included the gifts of approximately 300,000 employed men and women in Chicago.

Laments Young Film Actresses' Imitating Stars

Lose Individuality, Says Shrewd Executive.

BY GEORGE SHAFFER.

Hollywood, Cal., Sept. 23.—[Special.]—Darryl Zanuck, co-producer of Twentieth Century pictures and one of the shrewdest Hollywood executives, voices a lament that has been heard occasionally around Hollywood for a year.

Says Mr. Zanuck: "There is a main fault among younger feminine players. They are trying to ape the more successful ones—such as Garbo, Dietrich, Crawford, or Bennett. They are getting to have a screen face. The face is the same although the girls are different.

"In looking over portraits of girls suggested for rôles in stories, it is amazing how many of them look alike. One photograph could almost serve for the whole lot. The expression seems about the same, a vacuous look which expresses nothing so much as a desire to be a screen star."

It's the first time this complaint has been voiced from such a high source, but in reality it has been getting more and more difficult, as one meanders about Hollywood into one studio after another and into one favorite café after another to sort out the youthful young blondes. They all look alike.

One observes that nearly all the young blonde actresses have lost their individuality of appearance. Manifestations of this fact are:

1. They all wear an artificially glided and carefully waved marcelled hair.

2. They have denuded their eyebrows, replacing God's adornments with twin, curved pencil lines across the lower forehead.

3. All wear artificially darkened and beaded eye lashes, which the cameras "pick up" as a supposed asset in portraying some emotion.

4. And they all accentuate or change the natural curve of the lips with carmined smudges.

For illustration of the blondes who look alike, consider Marion Davies, Dorothy Mackaill, and Bette Davis. Or Constance Bennett, Carole Lombard, and Bette Davis. There are others, all of whom are being mistaken for one another: Ida Lupino, Toby Wing, Joan Marsh, Mary Carlisle, Alice White, Joan Blondell. But where it gets the most monotonous is where the dance directors find a couple of dozen replicas of each other every time they try to pick out girls for a musical film. It's got so the casting offices are so worried about the girls' facial sameness that it may be a liability instead of an asset in future for a girl to look just like somebody else.

J. P. McEvoy, writer, and Raymond Hatton, comedian, have been laid up with eye trouble. McEvoy contracted some infection.

Elinor Troy, 18 years old, who has self-confidence to match her good looks, came to Hollywood from Washington, D. C., last week, hunted up Leroy Prinz, the dance director at Paramount studio, and told him she was looking for a job in Hollywood choruses. Prinz paid no more than routine attention until she told him her ambition was to dance for Busby Berkeley, dance director at Warners studio and Prinz's outstanding professional rival.

At that Prinz got so interested that he wrote her a note of introduction to Berkeley and now Berkeley has picked her for a lead off showgirl rôle in "Gold Diggers of 1935." She's 5 feet 9 inches tall and a deep brunette, but Berkeley, who doesn't like his beauties so tall as that, explains that Miss Troy is so symmetrical that the height doesn't matter. There will be seventy grand pianos for one of the effects in Warners' "Gold Diggers of 1935." One show girl beauty will be assigned to each piano.

BLAZING GUNS

By WILLIAM MacLEOD RAINE

SYNOPSIS.

Mary Landis inherited the Lazy B ranch from her uncle. It adjoins the Circle 3 T ranch, owned by Chet Radbourne, powerful boss in the county, and Mary's legal guardian. He has been stealing Mary's cattle and trying to force her to marry him. To escape his tyranny Mary marries Cole Sanborn, fearless young outlaw and suspected train robber, within an hour after meeting him. The marriage is one in name only, giving them both better advantage to fight against their common enemy. Cole drops in on Chet Radbourne. A fight ensues. Two of Chet's men, Jerry Haskell, his foreman, and Curt Jordan, are injured. Cole escapes. Chet sends Jordan to Jonesboro to lie in wait for Cole. Jordan captures Mary and sends her back to Circle 3 T. Cole, unaware of Mary's plight, rides into Jonesboro with Rusty Hunter, one of his trusted men. He gets Judge Fairlay to sign an order terminating Chet's guardianship over Mary. Cole kills Jordan in self-defense and is exonerated. Chet sends Slim Calhoun, a good looking young outlaw, to ride the ranch with Mary. Slim dislikes his employer and is on the point of quitting. After a run-in with Haskell and Chet, Slim leaves the Circle 3 T and Mary gives him a letter to Cole.

INSTALMENT XXV.

A MESSAGE.

Pete Daggett brought a prisoner into camp, a gun trained on him.

"C-claims he's got a m-message for you," stuttered Pete.

Cole looked at the black haired fellow in plain lether chaps and cognized him at once.

"A message from Chet Radbourne?" he asked.

"Not from Chet," Slim answered, and he handed Sanborn a letter.

Before looking at the letter Cole made another remark. "Last time we met you came a-shooting."

"And the time before that," Calhoun amended coolly. "Yore horse was on the jump and I didn't score a hit. Glad of it now."

"How did you find our camp?"

"A nester gave me a line on it. I loaded him with a story I knew already and he kinda let slip where it was."

"You're one of Chet's riders?"

"Was," corrected Slim.

"I get it." Cole's voice held an edge of sarcasm. "You've had a quarrel with him and so you'd like to bury the hatchet with me."

Slim smiled. "I'm handing you a big laugh, Sanborn. That's exactly the way it is."

"I must be a mind reader," Cole said evenly.

He read the letter, not without difficulty. In the darkness some of the words had run over the edge of the paper. Lines were crossed. His first impression was that it was a forgery, but the reference to the stage kiss convinced him of its genuineness. Nobody except Mary could know he had said this.

"Am I supposed to ask what you were curios about?" Cole queried.

Cole flung a swift, abrupt question at Calhoun. "When did Jordan send Mrs. Sanborn back to the Circle 3 T?"

"Yesterday morning. He sent Gildea back with her. It must have been only an hour or two before you killed him."

"Is she safe at the ranch?"

"I'd say quite safe. Chet isn't fool enough to harm her."

"He'd better not," Cole said harshly.

After the first reading he turned back and went over the scrawled sheets a second time. No man could have called this a love letter. She had not even begun with the conventional "Dear Cole." But between the lines he read an emotion that set his blood racing. Every night she prayed they might not kill him. His brown face reflected no feeling, but a bell of joy pealed in his heart. He saw her kneeling beside the bed, slender and dainty, a remote mystery in a white nightgown, and the picture filled him with awe.

Cole looked into the black eyes of the Texan and liked what he saw there. He liked, too, the fellow's cool and easy manner, his assumption that no apologies were necessary for past alignments. But Chet was a tricky devil. He would have sense enough to choose an emissary who looked frank and honest. Perhaps they had pulled the wool over Mary's eyes.

"So you had a rumpus with Chet," Cole said. "How come?"

"I been on edge for quite some time," Slim replied. "More with Haskell than with the old man, though I never liked a hair of the old wolf's head. Yesterday Jerry beat the stuffing outa me. Whaled me till I couldn't stand."

"Yes?" Cole said, with a coolness that might have been incredulity.

"You might like to hear about that," Slim continued, reaching for the makings. "I got a leetle mite curious about something that was none of my business, and Haskell worked me over real thorough on account of it."

"Am I supposed to ask what you were curious about?" Cole queried.

"Up to you as to that," Slim said lightly. "You'll be interested before I'm through. Got a match?"

Slim lit the cigaret he had rolled and went on with his story. "I was camped near the mouth of Box Canyon the day before the K. & J. express robbery. Three fellows rode up the gulch. They didn't see me, but I saw them. One of the three was Jerry Haskell. I couldn't swear to the others account of the sun getting in my eyes." The ex-Circle 3 T man stopped to flash a grin. "Next time I saw Jerry was two days later. He was back on the job at the ranch. What kinda got my attention the day he rode up the canyon was that he was wearing curduroy pants, a blue polka dot bandanna, and a rattlesnake skin band round his hat. I hadn't seen him in that get up before, and I've never seen him in it since."

The black haired man had kept his promise to interest Cole. The latter looked at him steadily, without speaking, but he could not repress the eager excitement in his eyes.

"Me, I put two and two together, and it added just four." Slim explained casually. "Like I said, it was none of my business, and I let it ride until Chet picked me to ride with Mrs. Sanborn. She took a smile to me, and we became friendly. I don't claim to be anything but a hell-raisin' young rooster. Still and all, I know a lady when I meet up with one. If I could do Mrs. Sanborn a good turn I was ready to be Johnny-on-the-spot. Course I knew there was war between you and the Circle 3 T, and I began to wonder if Haskell was handing you the burnt end of the stick in the K. & J. robbery matter. So I visited his hogan when he was out on a looksee expedition. In a trunk I found the corduroy pants, the polka dot bandanna, and the rattlesnake band. I hadn't hardly more than closed the trunk when Jerry walked in on me. He was noways welcome. Before he got through socking me with his maulers I was plumb tired of him."

"That why you quit the Circle 3 T?" Cole asked.

"No, sir. My system can absorb a licking when it's coming to me without any hard feelings. I'll tell you why I quit. It just happened I was the guy who carried to Chet the news that you had rubbed out Jordan. It made him plenty sick. When he came out of that he made me a proposition. I was to bushwhack you and get the K. & J. reward money. Seeing I was sore at the skunk anyhow, I up and told him where to get off. He threatened me. I hit my saddle and lit out, with the old toad pumping lead at me. But I wasn't satisfied to leave without seeing Mrs. Sanborn, since I had figured I'd try to fix things up with you. I know the Circle 3 T layout, and it wasn't much risk to sneak back, tap on her window, and have a talk. That was when she wrote me the letter to give you."

"She says in this letter you've been kind to her."

Slim waved that aside lightly. "Nothing to that. I claim to be a white man, and when I went riding with her I acted like one. If I wanted credit for that I'd be proving I wasn't." He hesitated a moment before he carried on: "That old skunk is full of tricks. He hinted if I bumped you off it would be my turn with Mrs. Sanborn. My guess is I'd be dryguicked inside of a week."

The doubts of Cole had vanished. This Texan was not a spy from the camp of the enemy, unless his whole manner and appearance were lies. On the frontier character is etched upon the face and stamped into the bearing of a man. Slim was reckless and lawless, as Cole had always been himself, a rebel against the smug safety of conventions. He had followed joyously rough and crooked trails. But he would do to ride the river with when the stream was full and turbulent. More than once Sanborn's life had depended upon not making a mistake in his judgment of a man. He felt sure he was not making one now.

"Did you come here only to bring me this letter?" Cole asked. "Or is it your idea to throw in with us?"

"That last would be up to you, don't you reckon?"

The hard eyes of the two men met and held. There was as yet no friendliness between them, but each felt a curious sense of kinship with the other. Both had strayed to the edge of that borderland beyond which a decent man may not go, and both had now turned their backs forever on dishonor.

500,000 Catholics Here Pay Mundelein Anniversary Tribute

Catholic churches of the Chicago archdiocese were thronged yesterday as approximately half a million Catholics expressed their devotion to Cardinal Mundelein in a general communion in all parishes.

At the same time, in St. Peter's cathedral in Rome, Cardinal Mundelein was attending the second special service in the presence of Pope Pius honoring the cardinal's 25th anniversary as a bishop. The first service was held Friday.

The local services were the outgrowth of a message from Bishop Bernard J. Sheil, vicar general of the archdiocese, urging every church member to participate "in a holy bouquet of prayer and holy communion for Cardinal Mundelein." The archdiocese will have its formal celebration Nov. 10.

Nathaniel Owings and the Louis Skidmores have reserved for another cocktail party, and Friday Dr. and Mrs. Schmidt will entertain at cocktails for the young couple before a dinner the Taylor Strawns and the De Forest Hulburds are giving at the Casino.

While John McEwan was in town from Cincinnati over the week-end, he and his fiancée, Miss Margaret Hamill, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Ralph C. Hamill, completed plans for their wedding, which is to be solemnized at high noon next Friday at the Hamill home in Winnetka. It is to be a very small and quiet affair with just the immediate families and a few near relatives in attendance.

Miss Hamill will be unattended, but Mr. McEwan will have his brother, William, for his best man. After the service there will be a luncheon for the wedding guests. Then Mr. McEwen and his bride will whisk away on an extended journey from which they will return to make their home in Cincinnati. Mr. McEwan returned to Cincinnati last night, but he will be back here on Thursday evening.

Miss Hamill's two brothers have gone back to school in the east, Hunt to Milton academy and Ralph to Harvard university.

Fearing-Murray Wedding in Bronxville Today.

At 4 o'clock this afternoon in the Reformed church in Bronxville, N. Y., Miss Isabel Sutherland Murray, daughter of Mrs. William A. Murray, will become the bride of Munroe Fearing, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Fearing of Greenwich, Conn. Dr. John Powell, an old friend of the Fearing family, is to read the service. Miss Frances Andress of New York City will be Miss Murray's only attendant and Ernest Walker Smith of Farmington, Conn., will serve Mr. Fearing as best man. A small reception is to follow the ceremony at the home of Mr. Fearing's sister and brother-in-law, the Carol Lyttles in Scarsdale.

A luncheon this noon at the Glenview club will be the first fall meeting of the Evanston Junior league. Seated at the right hand of Mrs. John J. Louis, the league president, will be Jerome Gargill, the young man from New York who is to direct the league's "Follies," to be given the evenings of Nov. 1, 2, and 3, in the Glencoe school auditorium. The tryouts for the "Follies" are to take the form of a party the evening of Oct. 5 at the home of Mrs. Henry H. Windsor Jr. in Winnetka.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles S. Dewey sailed Saturday on the Champlain for a brief vacation in France.

Twelve hours too late for their sister's coming out party but in time for a gay week-end, Mr. and Mrs. Leopold S. Fetcher [Marguerite Foster] motored into town Saturday from their home in Cincinnati. The young Fetchers had hoped to get here in time for Miss Miriam Fetcher's debut Friday afternoon, but Mr. Fetcher's business schedule prevented their arrival before Saturday.

They spent the day Saturday in Winnetka with Mr. Fetcher's parents, the Edwin S. Fetchers, coming into town in time for dinner with Mrs. Fetcher's parents, Mr. and Mrs. George B. Foster. Yesterday they were among the most popular guests at the cocktail party Blake Blair had for Miss Theodosia Smith. They will return to Cincinnati on Wednesday.

Nancy Wilder Visits Parents in Winnetka.

The Erskine Wilders of Winnetka are enjoying a visit from their daughter, Nancy, who has been making her home in New York City since her graduation from Wellesley four years ago. A very smart young woman, Miss Wilder started as a free lance book reviewer and has done so well that she is now a regular contributor to one of New York's most important newspapers.

She arrived last week from the east and will be here through this week. Over the week-end she was a guest of Mrs. William H. Emry at her house in Lake Geneva. The Wilders' son, Thomas, has just returned to his studies at Lawrence college.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles R. Crane II. like northern Wisconsin so well that they are spending most of September at Cardinal's Manitowish lodge on Trout lake, near Woodruff.

Wellesley Hill Stillwell, who lives at the Chicago club, is back from a ten day fishing trip at Trout lake and he can tell some good fish stories, for, with Bolivar McArthur as his guide, he brought in some beautiful catches of bass and musky. One musky he caught in Big Rice lake weighed 15 pounds.

WEDDINGS

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Center Case of 5502 Magnolia avenue announce the marriage of their daughter, Elizabeth Center, to Raymond Canaday, son of Mrs. Stephen D. Canaday of Des Plaines. The ceremony took place on Saturday in the pastor's study of the North Shore Baptist church of Chicago, with the Rev. Herbert Whiting Virgin officiating. The bride was graduated from Northwestern university in 1931. She is a member of Delta Gamma sorority. Mr. Canaday is an attorney in Chicago. The couple will reside in Des Plaines.

Announcement is made of the marriage of Miss Muriel Stapp, daughter of the H. Russell Stapps, 1610 East Wayne street, South Bend, and granddaughter of Mr. and Mrs. L. M. Thompson of 7120 Vernon avenue, Chicago, to Harold Chester Olson of Chicago, son of Jacob Olson of Platte, S. D., on Saturday at 4 o'clock in the afternoon at the home of the bride's parents. The Rev. Charles Tupper Baillie of the First Presbyterian church of South Bend, formerly of Chicago, read the service. Mr. and Mrs. Olson will be at home after Oct. 1 at 6638 Greenwood avenue, Chicago.

Arabic Lattice.

BY NANCY CABOT.

One of the most popular efforts of quiltmakers to produce an unusual and effective block is seen in today's block, "Arabic Lattice." It was first pieced in 1880. This date is significant, due to the fact that for a short period afterward no sensationally popular quilts were pieced. Rose and gold are two mellow tones in which to make the quilt.

BY MARY MEADE.

Are they really turning out more tricky kitchen gadgets these days, or is it just that we're all becoming so labor saving conscious that we can't help spotting them whenever we take runs through a department store?

There's this latest affair for cooking rice, for instance. It's a wire screen ball which comes apart to form two half-spheres, or clicks back together again to give us a shiny cage for washing, boiling, or steaming rice. Into the lower half one hustles a cup of unwashed, uncooked rice—brown or white. On snaps the top half of the basket, secured by a shiny metal band around its fat middle. To wash the rice merely hold the basket beneath a strong jet of cold water from the tap. To boil it, drop the ball into boiling salted water, resting the small hook over the pan edge. Cook 20 minutes for white rice, 40 minutes for brown. Lift out by the neat hook and chain arrangement, let drain, and steam for a few minutes, then open the ball and turn out the rice all ready to serve.

Or if you don't like that idea, here's another business to ease along the job of rice cooking. It's simply a new aluminum cooking kettle with a clever lid and a bail with an "educated handle." At one side the lid is punctured with a small area of holes for drainage. Over this lies a flap of aluminum which sits snugly down while the kettle boils, but swings out when the kettle is tipped, allowing the water to run away through the holes. And here's where the smart elbow comes in, for during the tipping the lid is prevented from skidding sink-wards by bends in the bail which press the top firmly in place during the draining.

Still on this subject of sieves and strainers, have you discovered the surprising new combination colander, sieve, strainer, and what-not which they're showing in town? It's cousin to a smart French model, more than a million of which were sold to continental housewives last year. It came to town not so long ago and the girls seem to be trying to outdo the French housewives in their welcome.

But let's draw a picture. The new utensil is claimed to be rust proof and acid proof. It is composed simply of a band of metal three inches wide, formed into an upright crown eight inches in diameter. It has no bottom, the space within the circular sides being occupied by a low cone of pierced metal which meets the lower edge of the crown all around, then slopes to a cone point in a level with the top of the sides. Around, and close against this screen, a flat of metal moves when the handle at the side is turned. Food which has been dropped in the space around the cone is caught by this presser and forced speedily through the screen into whatever pan is placed below. This gives us a food puree, ricer, or masher. It rices enough potatoes in one and one-half minutes to serve ten hungry folks. Not even such small items as tomato or current seeds will slide through, so the business should be a grand help in making jams and jellies. We've even discovered that it neatly crushes graham cracker crums, sieving as it grates.

CONQUERING CONTRACT

By P. HAL SIMS

A SOMEWHAT DIFFERENT SITUATION.

I have almost concluded our examination of slam tries made by a short suited no trump bidder. There remains only the situation when this opening bid is made third or fourth hand, and the partner's response is a jump raise to three no trumps. This is, as you know, not a slam try when the bidder has already passed, it is merely "taking the strain off the opening bidder," a short cut to the game contract.

We May Dismiss the Fear of Endangering Our Game.

However, we must not make it too difficult for the opening bidder to develop a slam try in view of the information conveyed by this response. He knows that his partner has passed a useful hand, so that if he himself has slam possibilities, there is no risk of jeopardizing the game by bidding four no trumps. The "jeopardizing" angle need not be considered because responder has said: "Even if you have a minimum no trump opening bid, and that slightly shaded because of your position, we need not consider any safety refuge on this hand; it is good for three no trumps." Having a powerful hand with a trick in reserve, opener knows four or even five no trumps to be a safe contract, I feel, therefore, that he should make a slam try on this bidding with four and a half primary tricks plus useful intermediates. Such a hand as

Sp. A K x	Di. A 10 9 x
Ht. A J 9	Cl. K 10 x

merits a slam try when the bidding has been—pass by partner, one no trump, three no trumps. Bid four no trumps. If you have a four-card suit headed by two of the top three honors and a 4-4-3-2 distribution, bid four in that suit and develop the slam as explained in the last few articles. With a four-card suit headed by two of the top three honors and a 4-3-3-3 distribution, use judgment whether to bid four no trumps or four in the suit. If your partner is likely to gain as much as you would from being declarer, bid four no trumps in the hope that he can now bid your four-card suit [it happens so occasionally] with a 4-4-3-2 distribution. You know he has a short suited hand with values in at least three suits, because after passing it is his duty to respond in terms of a suit rather than no trumps if there is any close alternative. It is seldom that the slam is bid in anything but no trumps with hands of this type in the situation we are considering.

Duty of Responding Hand.

The responding player must exercise good judgment in accepting this invitation to slam. Remembering that his partner is already counting on him for substantial values in high cards, and may have made the slam try on no more than four and a half primary tricks, responder should pass the slam try unless he holds two an. a half primary tricks with some intermediate support distributed over not less than three suits. If the slam try was made by a bid of four no trumps he should pass if lacking these values; if opener developed it by bidding four in a suit, the sign-off consists in bidding four no trumps, which is equivalent to passing a four no trump rebid by the opener.

In This Situation There May Be a Sign-Off at Five No Trumps.

The bidding having been—Pass, one no trump, three no trumps, four no trumps, responder with such a hand as

Sp. J 9 x x	Di. K J x
Ht. K x x	Cl. A Q x

should bid five no trumps. Now the opener with a mere four and a half trick hand may pass, if he feels that two and a half tricks in the dummy will not give him a good enough play for six no trumps.

If the responding hand has actually three primary tricks which he passed because his hand was of the defensive type, he should again take the strain off the opening bidder by bidding six no trumps over four. With

Sp. J 9 x x	Di. K 10 x
Ht. K Q x	Cl. A Q x

he would pass as dealer or second hand; but on the bidding we have assumed, he certainly wants to slam when his partner makes a slam try. If this was done with a shaded four and a half trick hand, the slam is nevertheless not seriously in doubt; while if opener has five primary tricks, a holding with which he would make a short-suited slam try even if he were dealer or second hand, the small slam is a virtual certainty and there is likely to be a play for seven-odd. Grand Slams with no five card suit to work with always need some margin of intermediate values; but if opener's hand were

Sp. A K 10	Di. A Q x
Ht. A J x	Cl. K J x x

and the bidding went—Pass, one no trump, three no trumps, four no trumps, six no trumps, he has every right to go seven. He can name the three primary tricks in his partner's hand. Actually, he would have to win the spade finesse with the hands as given; but if responder's four card suit were any but spades, grand slam would be made then and there by an even break of that suit. If the break failed, there would still be the spade finesse for it.

Let Not Sun Set on Wrath Called Good Advice for Parents

BY GLADYS HUNTINGTON BEVANS

"Let not the sun go down upon thy wrath," says the Bible.

Besides its moral value, this ancient advice has its special psychological significance for parents. [Did you ever read the Bible as a psychological document?]

It is not well to let your child go to bed angry—at you or at anyone or anything else.

It is not well to let your child go to bed weighed down by your anger.

No matter what the cause, make it up with him somehow before he goes to sleep. Whether it is something slight or serious, anger should be dissipated. If it is something which can't be cleared up as he lies in bed, he should be able to go to sleep with the calmness and security that come from the assurance of your love.

"If your child is "mad at you," and whether his attitude is justified or not, talk with him until the warm feeling of closeness melts him and he is no longer angry. The carrying-over of a grudge can become a habit that spells real unhappiness for the one who holds such feelings.

Perhaps your child is angry with you with reason. You may have been hasty in a decision or unwittingly unjust. If so, it does no harm to admit it, and a mother who can say, "I'm sorry," or "forgive me," will stand higher with her children and create in them a willingness to admit their own mistakes.

The DEBUNKER

By John Harvey Furbay, Ph. D.

There is no particular plant which is called the shamrock by botanists. The word in Irish is "seamrog," and refers to any plant with three leaflets. It has often been applied to watercress, although this plant is not trifoliate. It is said that St. Patrick once plucked a three-leaved clover and used it to explain the Trinity. On March 17 Irishmen and many others wear various clovers, white-flowered oxalis or wood sorrel, or perhaps watercress—all of which are called "shamrocks" by the wearers.

Erect and Dignified Bearing Is Essential for New Modes

BY ANTOINETTE DONNELLY.

The "proud carriage" is what you are to travel about in this fall, girls! You operate it on your own muscle power, too, by the way! The headlight is important! The light in which you hold your head, perhaps, I'd better put it.

This carriage has nothing to do with taxis, or lizzies, or royces, or what you've been using for traveling to date. It's just something you have to build yourself if you don't already own a proud carriage. It operates on two feet, your own [and not the other fellow's]! Some of the fashionists who tell us what to do, so that our clothes will look at least what they cost us, call it "proud walking," which I think a grand term. I don't know any other term that would cover so inclusively what the fall and winter clothes call for. Not that it is just a cultivation for one or two seasons' adoption. It has been serving shabby clothes with an air, good clothes with great distinction, for time immemorial. Also, without question of a doubt, it's the kind of carriage that carries women into the late years with youthfulness of motion.

We should be delighted that fashion takes it up, since fashion has no rival as an influence in feminine circles. You can preach health to a lady until the cows come home, but tell her that it's the style and that's all you have to say.

Well, it is the style now to carry yourself like a self-respecting, dignified person, even rather a haughty one, if you like. Better to look haughty than as if you didn't care. The aforesaid fashionists quite frankly advocate the nose-in-the-air walk to carry becomingly the luxurious clothes of the season. But the nose in the air is not quite the effect wanted. The fall look [that is, stretched-up-high spine with a tall head on top of it] is what is recommended.

You might try the traditional walking practice of going the rounds of the room with a book on your head. It's a good a gauge as any of whether you are a proud walker or a humble one. If you've been in the tropics lately, or at any time, the memory of the colored women going along the roads weighted, not down, but upright with baskets or enormous trays on their heads, will reëstablish the currently desirable proud carriage for you.

Or, closer to home, there's the West Point cadet, than whom we have no better example of proud walking. Anyway, this is your order, girls, so you'd better get after the walk immediately.

Past Mistakes Are Best Kept Totally Secret

BY DORIS BLAKE.

The advisability of confiding a past mistake to the girl's current love is one of those queries recurring so frequently as to give the lie to those moderns who talk in terms of sex freedom before marriage. It's not the girl's game, as we have suggested here before. Morally speaking, it is not the man's game either. But it is in the nature of man, and society's indulgence toward him, that he can get away with his indiscretions with comparative ease. The girl is simply differently constituted. She does not forget. Her memory becomes keenly sharpened when she finally meets that one man who stirs her profoundly. She wishes then, as she never wished before, for a stainless record. We are talking of the average normal young woman, naturally, not of the school of waywards, victims of promiscuous propaganda.

When this one and only man has become the dominating factor in the young woman's life, it is then she asks whether she should tell him or not. Our advice is, and always has been, to keep the secret locked in her bosom, that there is no good to be gained from transposing it from one's own conscience to another's. If a mistake has been made in the past, it has been made, and the less said about it the better. If it is regretted, let that be atonement enough. We have never known an instance yet where the confession served a useful purpose.

"At first," Dee confides, "he overlooked what I told him, said it would make no difference to him and his feelings for me. You see I had to tell him, it was so on my conscience. But now he is drifting away from me. Within the last two months we have broken off four times. Each time he comes back of his own accord, but now claims that he does not want to marry me, although he likes my company. I wish now that I had never told him. I know now I was wrong in telling him. I don't know why I did. And I know he would marry me but for my confession!"

Well, that's the way of the average male in his reaction to the confidence under discussion. He will speak indulgence at first, perhaps, but time does not dull the disillusion. Even though marriage does ensue, it is still a confidence that were better left unmade.

Getting Down to Business

On the Clothes Question Means an Early Visit to Carson's

"Business Clothes" went out with the "business woman." Today, business is just one side of the many-sided life of the woman who does things—and she's distinguishable only by her chic good taste and her alertness to the new in fashion—as represented by these carefully selected frocks, coats, and accessories from Carson's.

If you have a "sense of proportion" you'll feel the charm of this beautifully designed hat. The wide front brim, the high back, the modified Alpine crown—all contribute to its success. Of fine fur felt. $8.75.

Millinery, Fifth Floor.

"Smart, yet roomy"—that's the cry of the business woman when she's choosing her tailored bag. This calfskin bag has 7 pockets, besides the famous back Tukway pocket. Black or brown calfskin, plain or grained, with two zip fasteners. $7.50.

Bags, First Floor.

The split tunic dress is in all the latest Paris bulletins. This one, of fiance crepe, is trimmed with simulated antique jewelry—a new stunt of the French couturiers. Coronet blue, jewel blue, gold color. Women's sizes. $35.

Fine dark mink collars are irresistible flatterers. And when they top stunning coats—what a wearable fashion you have. Women's sizes, half sizes, misses' sizes. The one shown, $110. Black and brown. Others $85 and up.

Hudson seal coats with rippled lapels that may button up to a bracelet collar when you want to be extra warm. One of a group of very wearable Hudson seals—and we are able to offer these again at this low price—$195.

A double moire weave cape collar with a Directoire air trims this crepe frock, which slips off its tailored belt and puts on a dressy tasseled cord when it goes out to dinner. Black, brown, green. 12 to 20. $19.75.

Softest of knits—yet thoroughly practical, for it's opposed to wrinkling. Plain color cardigan, two-tone slipover, diagonally striped skirt—such are the three pieces. 14 to 20. Complete at $19.75.

The long-coated suit like the one shown here (third figure from the left) is fast becoming a "can't-do-without" for every practical wardrobe. This one, of herringbone tweed, has a distinctly British air. Heather blue, brown, green. 14 to 40. $29.75.

The fox collar on this slim coat (worn by the fourth figure from the left) may be a pouch, "halfway shawl," or the regulation shawl—all depending on how you fasten it. Black or brown diagonal woolen with dyed blue or red fox. 12 to 20. $69.75.

The short suit with lapin collar is an essential to the wardrobe that gets around a lot. Brown, green, or carioca, with brown lapin. 14 to 20. $29.75.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Green Bay, Wis., Sept. 23.—The Chicago Bears, champions of the National Professional football league for the last two years, made an auspicious start in defense of their title today by defeating the Green Bay Packers, 24 to 10. Fifteen thousand fans taxed the capacity of the City stadium, despite the threatening weather, to watch the Chicagoans score their first league victory of the season.

Bronko Nagurski, 230 pound full back, crashed his way through the powerful Packer line to bring the Bears victory. And again today, as so often last year, the Bears waited until the last quarter to stage a sensational rally, after the Packers had tied the score, 3 to 3, in the second period and 10 to 10 in the third.

Nagurski Leads Way.

Nagurski scored two touchdowns, one on a 40 yard run in the final minutes of the game. His pass over the line to Hewitt scored the first Bear touchdown.

Beattie Feathers, star half back on the University of Tennessee team last season, made a successful start in the professional league, accomplishing several long gains and brilliant returns of punts.

Six of the Bears' points were scored by Jack Manders, place kicking full back, who made three extra points and a field goal.

The Bears made ten first downs to the Packers' eight. It was the first defeat for the Packers, who last week whipped the Philadelphia Eagles, 19 to 6, in their opening game.

Manders Kicks One.

The Bears had several scoring opportunities in the first half, but brilliant punting by Hinkle kept them at bay on each occasion.

An exchange of punts following the opening kickoff gave the Bears the ball on the Packers' 45 yard line. A pass was incomplete. Feathers then made one yard and on the next play Ronzani passed to Feathers for 29 yards, placing the ball on the 15 yard line. Manders replaced Ronzani, and standing on the 24 yard line with Brumbaugh holding the ball, kicked a field goal to put the Bears into the lead, 3 to 0.

The Packers received their first scoring opportunity when Goldenberg intercepted a pass and carried the ball to the Bears' 38 yard line. Grove then raced 26 yards down the field to the Bears' 12 yard line.

Monnett's Kick Ties Score.

Hinkle gained three yards and Grove and Monnett each added two. Monnett stepped back to the 16 yard line and made the kick which tied the score.

The Bears began to click early in the third period. Nagurski and Ronzani carrying the ball to the Packers' 38 yard line. Then Nagurski raced around left end for 31 yards, bringing the ball to the Packers' seven yard line.

On a fake plunge, Nagurski charged toward the center of the Packers' line, stopped and threw a pass to Hewitt.

RUSSELL RUNS 102 YDS.; CARDS WHIP REDS, 9-0

Dave Cook Kicks 29 Yard Field Goal.

BY WILFRID SMITH.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Dayton, O., Sept. 23.—The Chicago Cardinals opened their National league schedule here today with a 9 to 0 victory over the Cincinnati Reds before a crowd of 5,400.

The game was won on the first play, the kickoff, when Dougal Russell, a fleet, shifty half back from the University of Kansas took the ball in his own end zone and ran 102 yards, more than the length of the field, for a touchdown. As subsequent events proved, these were the winning points, but in the third period, Dave Cook, Illinois half back, place-kicked from the 29 yard line, with Frank Greene, of Tulsa, holding the ball, to put victory out of reach of the Reds.

Six All-Star Players.

The Cardinals, boasting a completely revamped lineup over 1933 and with six players who participated in the recent All-American-Chicago Bears game sponsored by THE TRIBUNE were superior to Cincinnati in all phases of the combat. Interest centered on the Cardinal offense, for the Cincinnati eleven seldom reached midfield. However, the Reds under the supervision of their playing coach, Elsey Clark, managed to stave off several Cardinal scoring threats.

Mid-August weather, following an early morning rain, which soaked the gridiron, handicapped both teams.

Russell's run involved beautiful judgment of pace on his part and he had excellent protection most of the way. He progressed in a straight dash for more than 40 yards with the Cardinals taking out the Cincinnati players, and then he twice reversed his field to dodge the safety men and continue to the goal. Paul Pardonner, former Purdue quarter back, attempted to drop kick the extra point, but Clark, lined up inside his right end, came through to block the kick.

Pardonner Gets Away.

In the third period, Pardonner set the stage for another score when he returned a punt 40 yards to the Reds' 14 yard line. Two line plays netted five yards and a short forward pass then made a first down on the Reds' three yard line. On the second play from scrimmage, the Cardinals scored but the ball was called back when George Duggins of Purdue, at right end, was offside. The Reds then took the ball on downs.

Following an exchange of kicks, the Cardinal attack again bogged. Here, on fourth down, Cook dropped back and kicked his field goal.

Homer Griffith of Southern California and Roy Horstmann, a member of Purdue's 1932 eleven, who played with the Boston Braves last year, showed exceptional ability. Horstmann went through center for several gains of 10 yards or more on spinner plays, while Griffith advanced successfully on off-tackle drives.

Line Overpowers Reds.

On defense the Cardinal line overpowered the Reds with a quartet of tackles—Capt. Lou Gordon, Pete Mehringer, Harry Field, and Ted Isaacson—sharing honors. In contrast to other seasons, the Cardinals played alert, aggressive football.

Coach Paul Schissler of the Cardinals brought a squad of 25 to Dayton. All saw action today. The Cardinal attack used the Notre Dame system with occasional selection of plays from a single wing back offense.

Goslin Spurned Work Behind Plow to Pound Baseballs Far

[This is the second of a series of sketches of members of the Detroit Tigers who will battle the Giants in the impending world series.]

BY IRVING VAUGHAN.

If Leon [Goose] Goslin hadn't made up his mind at an early age that he was a ball player he might have become a good farmer. However, there is doubt about the latter point since the veteran, now playing left field for the Tigers, never gave any one a chance to judge his skill behind the plow, in the potato patch, or at looking after the cows. He didn't care about his father's big farm in southern Jersey. Neither was he impressed by warnings that he would come to no good end if he persisted in avoiding about 99 per cent of the work given him.

The Goose was for baseball first and last and didn't care who knew it. Just to prove he was no farmer at heart he whittled a baseball from a block of wood and fashioned a bat from a tree limb when 9 years old. He claims the kids really played with those kind of implements and that he could hit the wooden ball 25 feet.

His Nose Has Nothing to Do with Nickname.

Goose, who was given that name because it was fitted to be paired with Goslin, and not because of his Durante schnozzle, had an idea he was destined to be some shakes as a pitcher. He started as such with a team at Salem, N. J., a town close to the Goslin homestead. He looked fairly good, at least sufficiently enough to impress an umpire named Bill McGowan who was just starting on the road that finally landed him in the American league.

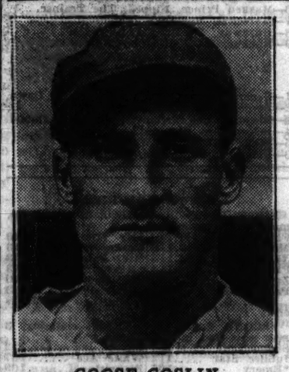
McGowan recommended the long nosed youth to the Columbia, S. C., team of the Sally league and a deal was closed. The Goose pitched about a dozen games for Columbia in 1920 and his luck was about 50-50, but the manager detected unmistakable signs of hitting ability. Goslin was promptly given outfield work when he wasn't pitching and the next season he was exclusively a hitting fly chaser. He hit so well that he went to the Washington Senators and during the spring training jaunt of 1921 Clark Griffith, the Washington owner, labeled him a man who wouldn't be stopped by big league pitching. He hasn't been stopped much during the intervening years.

Goose an Old Timer in World Series Play.

The Goose now is a fairly old hand at world series toil. He was involved in the 1924 series which the Senators won from the Giants and in the 1925 series which was won by Pittsburgh. In 1930 he was traded to St. Louis, presumably because his arm was thought dead as the result of trying to show some college boys he could excel them in throwing a discus. But the arm wasn't dead after all, it was merely resting, so the Senators grabbed him back after the 1932 season and he horned into another world series last fall. Then the Senators shipped him to Detroit last winter, the excuse being that he didn't fit in with Manager Joe Cronin's scheme. Now we find the Goose in another post-season event which will pay him well.

Goslin never has been an outstanding man on defense, but he hasn't yet been knocked cold by a fly ball and that's something. He might blunder occasionally in the field, but he'll make up for it with his bat. Giant pitchers are advised to keep this in mind. He has a world series batting average that's not to be given the laugh.

STILL HITS 'EM



GOOSE GOSLIN.

SOX LOSE PAIR, 2-1, 5-1, BUT ARE CHEERING ROOKIE

Kennedy Pitches Brilliant Game in Opener.

BY IRVING VAUGHAN.

The White Sox weren't able to put on any extra frills yesterday in their last 1934 appearance before the home folks. They were still the feeble, eighth place Sox, and proved it by folding up in both ends of a double header with the Cleveland Indians. The first ended 2 to 1 and the second 5 to 1, thus stretching the south siders' losing streak to eight games.

Much of the feebleness so noticeable from the start to the finish of the lengthy program cannot be charged against a couple of youthful pitchers who did most of the work for the Sox. There was little wrong with Vernon Kennedy, recently arrived from Oklahoma City, in the opening battle, which was his second start for the Chicagoans.

There also was little in the work of Les Tietje to complain about, at least not until near the close of the second game. But in both struggles the Sox batters were pitifully weak in the pinches against Monte Pearson and Ralph Winegarner.

Kennedy Is O. K.

What young Kennedy may do after another new deal in 1935 eased any pains Manager Jim Dykes might have suffered over the whipping. The newcomer, had he been provided with airtight support, might easily have gone through the nine innings without yielding a run. One of the scores against him grew from a slip on the part of Catcher Shea, and the other was the product of two scratch hits. Besides this, the freshman member fielded his position in such a way as to furnish a lesson for other throwers who are inclined to be less enterprising.

Tietje turned out six classy innings before running into an assault that settled everything. In these six inning he surrendered one run, for which Freshman Marshall Mauldin was responsible. Then the Indians got Tietje into a corner with three singles good for a run in the seventh and the two others were pushed over the plate a moment later when Earl Averill rammed a $400 home run into the seats. It was the thirtieth of the season for the Indian star and the fifth since the bonus clause in his contract became effective.

FIRST GAME

Everything was conducted in orderly fashion in the first game until the Sox built up what proved to be false hopes in the fourth. Mauldin led off with a single to left for his second hit. Simmons lined to Averill and Bonura scratched a hit past Pearson. A wild pitch enabled the two runners to advance. Appling walked, filling the bases, and there was great excitement, but not for long. Radcliff forced Mauldin at the plate and barely escaped being doubled at first base. The rally blew up completely when Hayes tapped gently to Pearson.

Knickerbocker singled to right with one gone in the fifth. This was the starter of the Indians' first run. He stole second and went to third a moment later on a passed ball by Shea. Then Berg drove him home on a single and the crowd immediately had plenty to say to Shea about his fielding miscue. Appling made a great stop behind second to force Berg on Pearson's grounder, after which Galatzer walked. Simmons took Averill's fly and further trouble was avoided for the time being.

Indians Pick Up Another.

Only two hits were involved in the scoring of the Indians' second run in the eighth. Galatzer started it by beating out a single to deep short and took second on Averill's infield out. He moved to third on Trosky's scratch hit to Hayes, who couldn't make the throw because first base was uncovered. Vosmik then filed to Radcliff and Galatzer dashed home after the catch.

The slight disturbance raised by the Sox in the ninth started with Bonura's

Weaver Holds Pirates; Cubs Win, 3-2, on Klein's Homer

BY EDWARD BURNS.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Pittsburgh, Pa., Sept. 23.—Chuck Klein's 20th home run of the season, his first since he hit one against the pirates in Chicago on July 7, gave the Cubs the run with which they defeated the Pittsburghers, 3 to 2, today, in the Pirates' final game of the season at home.

The game was a good one considering the weariness of the two greatly disappointed outfits, made so to a great extent by the pitchers, Jim Weaver and Cy Blanton, the latter just back from Albany and the former not so far away from Newark that his zeal in major league competition can be questioned. Each of the erstwhile International leaguers allowed only six hits.

All three Cub runs were unusual in their production. The first was forced home on a walk, the second, and please remember this for all time, was rung up when Gabby Hartnett scored from second on a wild pitch, and the third, as you've been told, was Klein's first homer in more than ten weeks.

Extra Base Hits Produce.

There was great similarity between the two runs scored by the Pirates. The first was made on a double to left by Jensen and a double to left center by Paul Waner, and the other one was registered on a double to left by Jensen and a triple to left center by Paul Waner. Waner's two hits gave him a batting percentage of .667 today, aiding him to retain his league batting lead.

The Cubs stayed firmly lodged in third place as they concluded one of their most listless road trips in history. It wasn't so much the fact that they lost 11 out of 19, but the way they lost them.

The Cubs got a cheap run in the second inning and had the bases full when the light went out. The bases first were loaded on a walk to Babe Herman, Stainback's infield hit, and a shot off Weaver's head. Then Hack walked on four pitches, forcing in Babe Herman. Bill Herman ran the count to three balls and two strikes, then lined to Roettger for the third out.

Weaver Starts Out Well.

Weaver retired the first seven Pirates before Grace clicked the first hit off Jim, a single to right with one out in the third. But Weaver kept the ratio of batsmen down to three an inning by launching a double play after seizing Blanton's grounder.

Stainback led off the fourth inning with his and the Cubs' second hit, another single, but he was forced by Jurges. Weaver popped to Grace, then Hack's grounder went between Theve-

The Cubs got a cheap run in the second inning and had the bases full when the light went out. The bases first were loaded on a walk to Babe Herman, Stainback's infield hit, and a shot off Weaver's head. Then Hack walked on four pitches, forcing in Babe Herman. Bill Herman ran the count to three balls and two strikes, then lined to Roettger for the third out.

Weaver Starts Out Well.

Weaver retired the first seven Pirates before Grace clicked the first hit off Jim, a single to right with one out in the third. But Weaver kept the ratio of batsmen down to three an inning by launching a double play after seizing Blanton's grounder.

Stainback led off the fourth inning with his and the Cubs' second hit, another single, but he was forced by Jurges. Weaver popped to Grace, then Hack's grounder went between Theve-

REDS SCORE TWO IN 9TH TO WIN 2D CONTEST, 4-3

Dizzy Dean Saves Opener, 9-7.

Cincinnati, O., Sept. 23.—(AP)—The St. Louis Cardinals lost the second game of a double-header to the Cincinnati Reds today, remaining on even terms with the league leading Giants, who also split. The Cards captured the first game, 9 to 7, but faltered in the ninth to lose the second contest, 4 to 3.

The first game was a free hitting affair, but in the second the Reds were able to win by scoring two runs without the aid of a hit.

In the ninth of the second game Paul Dean walked Comorosky; then Alex Kamporis, who batted for Derringer, laid down a neat sacrifice. Dean picked it up and threw it so far over Collins' head that Comorosky scored the tying run and Kamporis went to third.

Brother Jerome Dean relieved Paul at this point and issued passes to both Slade and Adams to fill the bases. Mark Koenig then filed to Medwick and Kamporis came home with the winning run. Dizzy Dean had relieved Haines in the first game to stop a Cincinnati rally. Scores:

Yankees Still Have Chance—but That's All

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

The Tigers failed to clinch the American league pennant yesterday when they dropped the first game of a double-header to St. Louis, but when they won the second they left the Yankees with nothing more than a chance to tie for the flag, despite New York's two triumphs over Boston. The Giants, meanwhile, maintained their 2½ game margin over the Cardinals in the National league, when each divided a double-header.

The Yanks gained a game by their two victories, but trail by 5½ games with only five left for the Tigers and six for New York. The Giants have four left in which to protect their lead, while the Cards, one behind in the losing column, have seven contests in which to make up the deficit.

Cards Must Win 7 Games.

By winning all of their remaining games, the Giants would clinch the pennant regardless of what the Cardinals might do. If the Giants should win three of four, the Cardinals, by capturing all seven of their remaining games, could tie them for first place. This would necessitate a playoff series of three games after the regular season ends next Sunday.

The Giants' remaining games, all at home, are with Philadelphia and Brooklyn. They play the Phillies in single games Tuesday and Wednesday, and Brooklyn on Saturday and Sunday. The Cardinals, meanwhile, play off a postponed game with the Cubs at Wrigley Field today, meet Pittsburgh in single games at St. Louis Tuesday and Wednesday, and then wind up with four games against Cincinnati at St. Louis.

Should rain force postponement of any of these games and no arrangements could be made for playing them off before the end of the campaign, they would be washed permanently off the schedule:

Percentages Decide Victors.

The championship is decided on percentages as of the final day of the regular season. No provision has been made for playing off postponed games after the season has ended, no matter what effect failure to play them might have on the final standing.

GOODMAN, LITTLE DEFEAT ARMOUR AND COOPER, 1 UP

3,500 See Amateurs Win Caddy Benefit Match.

BY CHARLES BARTLETT.

America's No. 1 amateur twosome, Lawson Little of San Francisco and Johnny Goodman of Omaha, yesterday demonstrated to a gallery of 3,500 at the Indian Hill club how to win an 18 hole golf match, 1 up, from two such pulsant professionals as Tommy Armour of Medinah and Harry Cooper of Glen Oak. Lawson and Johnny went 1 up at the sixth, increased that to 2 up at the 11th, and then, after allowing the pros to win the 15th with Armour's birdie, clung to their advantage to the finish. Little matching Tommy's birdie on the 18th.

For all the excellent golf played, the most startling feature of the afternoon was the attendance, which far exceeded the expectations of Western Golf association officials, who sponsored the match. The fame of the four competitors, particularly of Little, who now holds both the American and British titles, undoubtedly was responsible. It was the largest gallery to follow a match of this type in recent memory, and at times the hundreds who pursued it almost became out of hand. During the course of the match four spectators were hit around the greens, such was the congestion. When they were playing the 15th hole, advance guards of fans already were grouped around the three finishing carpets, a condition ordinarily found only at national events.

Armour Shoots 69.

Little had the satisfaction of a decision over Armour, who has done much to improve his game within the last year in random visits to Medinah, but Tommy still had the laugh on Lawson when it came to medal scoring. The Silver Scot knocked down a 69, two under par, against Little's 70. Goodman and Cooper each turned in 73s.

The individual and best ball cards follow:

Par—Out	545	344	443—36
Par—In	344	345	435—35—71
Armour—Out	545	345	442—36

Little—Out	545	444	442—36
Little—In	335	345	434—34—70
Cooper—Out	554	355	443—38
Cooper—In	344	355	425—35—73
Goodman—Out	544	344	444—37
Goodman—In	444	345	525—36—73
Little-Goodman—Out	544	344	442—34
Little-Goodman—In	334	345	434—32—66
Armour-Cooper—Out	544	345	442—35
Armour-Cooper—In	344	344	424—32—67

The entire proceeds of the match were turned over to the caddy scholarship fund of the Western Golf association, used to send deserving honor caddies through Northwestern university. Norman Freer, president of the organization, said last night yesterday's receipts would defray the expenses of two years' education for six boys.

Little Shows Drivin: Skill.

The fans who came to see Little's thundering tee shots were not disappointed. He was away on every hole except the third, where Armour outhit him by five yards, and the 13th, where they were even off the tee.

They halved the first five holes, Goodman and Cooper sharing birdies on the third. The professionals lost the sixth to the amateurs' par 4s. Armour being short in two, while Cooper was wild with his drive. The next three were halved, Tommy sinking a 12 footer for a deuce at the ninth to match Little, who was almost stony with his drive.

The 11th was conceded to the amateurs when Little's second again was straight to the pin for a birdie. The next three were halved, and the pros rallied to take the 511 yard 15th, where Armour chipped dead after two fine wood shots. They halved the remaining holes, Cooper sinking a nine foot putt for a deuce at the 17th to equal Goodman's drive to within four feet.

Armour laid his chip shot to the 18th stiff, and Little, chipping from almost the same position, made a shot which appeared as though it would hit the pin, crossing the hole finally by five feet. The Californian dropped it for a half.

18 Kennel Clubs to Combine for Specialty Show

BY BOB BECKER.

Dog fanciers from all over the United States will gather in Chicago Oct. 20 and 21, for the largest combined specialty dog show held anywhere in this country.

On these two days 18 dog clubs will combine for the annual show [under the auspices of the Western Specialty association] which will be held in the Coliseum. Last year more than 1,000 animals of 18 breeds were benched.

The breeds that will be on view at the coming show include cocker spaniels, springer spaniels, collies, Dobermann pinschers, Great Danes, airedale terriers, smooth and wirehaired terriers, Irish terriers, Kerry blue terriers, schnauzers, Scottish terriers, pekingese, pomeranians, Boston terriers, chows, English bull dogs, shepherds, and American bull terriers.

Officials of the Western Specialty association have chosen the Coliseum for the show because the big building will assure more space for judging as well as more seats or standing room for those who attend. As a rule, the average dog show is held in quarters too small for the comfort or convenience of spectators.

With one or two rows of chairs around the judging space, only a small percentage of the public can be seated to watch judges select winners. Moreover, these seats are not elevated as they should be. With proper attention to these details, the forthcoming show can eliminate the obstacles to good showmanship.

Last year the October dog show pulled an entry of 125 cocker spaniels, a breed or dog that is extremely popular today. This year the Cocker Spaniel Club of the Middle West is working to bring the entries up to 150, according to an announcement made yesterday by Herb A. Washburn, president of the organization. Owners of cockers who wish to enter their dogs should get in touch with Adam E. Strauss, secretary of the club, 4039 North Meade avenue, Chicago.

BLUE RIBBONS STRETCH LEAD IN CLASSIC LEAGUE

The Pabst Blue Ribbon team strengthened its hold on first place in the Classic league last night when it won two games while the second place Budweisers lost two. As a result the Vrba Motors went into a tie for the runnerup position with the Budweisers.

Scores were fairly low with Paul Krumske of the Edelweiss Beers shooting 648 for high series. Bill Lenzen's 267 was the high individual game for the evening. Budweiser's 1,081 was top team game. Vrba Motors shot 921 and 921 for the first two games and came back with 1,000, taking two games from last year's champions, the Baby Ruths.

Lubbock, Tex., Sept. 23.—[Special.]—The University of Texas football team won its first game under the direction of Coach Jack Chevigny, former Notre Dame star, last night by defeating Texas Tech, 12 to 6.

Celebron and Miller Head Marigold Card

Professional boxing shows will be presented tonight at Marigold Gardens, Broadway and Grace street, and Midway arena, 6115 Cottage Grove avenue. An amateur program also will be held at Community Recreation center, 4711 West Madison street.

Billy Miller and Billy Celebron, Golden Gloves products, will clash at eight rounds at 147 pounds at Marigold, and Johnny Stanton, Minneapolis, Minn., lightweight, will meet Joe Kleko in an eight round feature bout at Midway. The amateur program to be conducted under the auspices of the Earl Mastro Boxing club, will feature a three round match between Harry Smith, Jewish Organized Youths' heavyweight, and John Clanton, runnerup in the recent Central A. A. U. outdoor tournament.

Celebron will be in quest of his 18th triumph in as many pro appearances against Miller, which probably will be his hardest test. Sammy Mandell and Joey Sangor, former featherweight rivals, will second the fighters, Mandell manages Celebron and Sangor supervises Miller. The five supporting bouts follow:

Frank Mirabal vs. Freddy Gravelle [6], 126.

Sammy Guidara vs. Willie Dudiak [4], 121.

Bud Ginter vs. Young Kid Chocolate [4], 125.

Tony Mandell vs. Cy Babbler [4], 149.

Al Williams vs. Ralph Garibaldi [wrestling].

Stanton, who whipped Geno Salvatore and Gene Higgins in his latest starts, and Kleko will be meeting for the second time. On July 9 they fought an eight round draw. Jimmy Christy, Catholic Youth organization 126 pound boxer, will make his first appearance in several weeks in the five round semi-final against Johnny Fitzpatrick. Four round bouts will bring into action Eddie Jackson and Louis Nassef, Jim Cool and Jack Robinson, and Billy Brown and Georgie Trapp.

Eight bouts will compose the card at Community Recreation center. Earl Mastro will serve as announcer. It will be his first appearance in a Chicago ring since he made a spirited but unsuccessful effort to dethrone Pat Battalino as featherweight champion at Chicago Stadium in 1931. Phil Collins, Tommy Thomas and Harry Mueller, all of whom are licensed Illinois athletic commission and A. A. U. officials, will referee. William [Pep] Kerwin and Leonard Sterling, announcers, will assist Earl. Frank Harmon, who finished third with more than 80,000 votes in THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE'S recent judging contest, has been invited to officiate.

Barney Ross, lightweight and junior welterweight champion; Harry Forbes and Jimmy Barry, ex-bantamweight title holders, and Davey Day, Frank Sigillo, Alodph Wiater, Leo Rodak and Joe Louis are among those who expect to be at the ringside.

The card:

Dave Schimmel and Dom de Felice, 118.
Benny Fiorentino and Poolio de Rose, 130.
Armond Morell and Chuck Linn, 126.
Frank Agnes and Sam Pasquale, 126.
Barney Peterson and Lou Maron, 140.
John Walsh and Whitey Bree, 155.
Bob Tinsley and L. Shapiro, 130.
John Clanton and Harry Smith, heavyweights.

George van der Hayden, South Bend, Ind., 130 pounder, will encounter Bill Reardon in a five round match on the Bob La Monte-Patrick Henry card tomorrow at Western stadium. Eddie Ward, undefeated since turning pro, will oppose Tony Muscarello for 1 rounds. Other matches t four rounds will be between Al Pahl and Eddie Chinski, Charles Young and Willie Davis, and Nestor Bruggman and Benny Duke.

Adolph Wiater and Joe Louis will end sparring drills this afternoon at Trafton's gymnasium for their 10 rou tracas Wednesday at Arcadia Gardens. . . . Johnny Phagan and Frank Battaglia have been signed to meet for the second time at the Arcadia, Oct. 10. . . . Buck Everett, Gary, Ind., has returned from Pittsfield, Ill., where he maintains he underwent treatments for an injury to his right arm. . . . Young Geno, La Salle, Ill., junior lightweight, yesterday was making preparations to depart for San Francisco, Cal., and place himself under the direction of Mike Cantwell. F. M.

SCHNEIDER BEATS TETTERTON IN EVANSTON RACE

Jimmy Schneider, Indianapolis, broke the winning streak of Ted Tetterton of North Chicago at the Evanston motor speedway yesterday by winning the 20 lap race.

Tetterton, who had made it nine straight at the track with a victory over Schneider and Charles Tegtmeier of Chicago in the opening 10 lap event, finished second in the main event, with Ernie Carlson of Chicago third. The other event contested, a 10 lap affair, went to Shorty Sorenson of Aurora, Ill., with Carlson second and Jimmy Malone third.

CHARLES YACCINO WINS 62 MILE BICYCLE RACE

Charles Yaccino of the Danish-American Cycling club, runnerup for the 1934 senior Illinois state championship, yesterday won the 62 mile bicycle race sponsored by the Belgian-American Athletic association. The race started at De Kalb, Ill., and ended at Fullerton and Talman avenues. The winner covered the distance in 2 hours 38 minutes.

Two Catholic Youth organization riders, Stanley Gadrin and Ray Ligman, finished second and third, respectively. Carl Lehmann, German-American Cycling club, was fourth, and George Thelin, a teammate of the winner, wheeled in fifth.

A bad spill near Sycamore, Ill., put many riders out of the race. Thirty-six, however, finished the event.

Joe Zukas Wins C. Y. O. Senior Tennis Title

Joe Zukas defeated Dave Barder yesterday to win the 1934 Catholic Youth organization senior tennis title in the final round at Hamilton park. Scores were 7-5, 2-6, 6-1, 6-4. Chester Murphy won the boys' title, beating Paul Zajaczkowski, while Helen Bartavis defeated Beatrice Greve to win the girls' championship.

TIGERS DIVIDE WITH BROWNS; ASSURED OF TIE

St. Louis Takes Opener, 4-3; Loses 2d, 2-1.

St. Louis, Mo., Sept. 23.—(AP)—The Tigers missed a chance to clinch the American league pennant today, although assuring themselves of a tie, and the New York Yankees retained their slim mathematical opportunity for a deadlock by winning a doubleheader from the Red Sox as Detroit split with the Browns. Two victories for the Tigers would have put the Yanks out of the race. A single defeat for the Yankees also would have meant the flag for Detroit.

The Browns beat Lynwood [Schoolboy] Rowe in the opener, 4 to 3, but the Tigers came back to win the second game, 3 to 1.

The Tigers' split reduced Detroit's lead to 5½ games. The Tigers have five more to play and New York six.

YANKS WIN PAIR.

New York, Sept. 23.—(AP)—The Yankees retained their mathematical chance of winning the American league pennant when they defeated the Boston Red Sox in two games today, 1 to 0 and 5 to 4, while the league leading Tigers divided a double header with the Browns.

Lefty Gomez limited the Red Sox to three hits in the opener to gain his 26th victory of the season and his sixth shutout. Arndt Jorgens drove in the only run with a single, after Lou Gehrig and George Selkirk had hit safely. Charley Ruffing had one bad inning in the second contest, and that extended the game to ten innings, after Gehrig hit his 47th homer to tie the score in the eighth. Ben Chapman knocked in the winning run in the tenth with a hit after Red Rolfe had doubled and Selkirk had singled. Scores:

SENATORS WIN, TIE.

Philadelphia, Pa., Sept. 23.—(AP)—A home run by Pete Susko in the ninth inning as darkness gathered gave Washington a 5 to 5 deadlock with the Athletics in the second game of a double-header today after Monte Weaver had outpitched Merritt Cain to win a 2 to 1 verdict for the Senators in the first game. MOON MULLINS—NIGHT DUTY

Indians Beat White Sox in Double Header

double to left after Simmons had filed out. Zeke's legs are none too sound, so Hopkins ran for him. Appling was moved out of the picture on a roller to Trosky. Then Radcliff filed to left center and either Vosmik or Averill could have caught the ball but pulled back for fear of a collision. The ball dropped between them for a double, Hopkins scoring. Haas was trotted forth to bat for Hayes, but filed to center.

SECOND GAME

After an uneventful first inning for each faction, the Sox cooked up a promising situation in the second, but it was only a gesture. However, it looks swell to see three men on base with none out. Appling opened with a single to center and Radcliff singled to right. Hayes bunted and beat Winegarner's throw to first. The fade-out started with three strikes for Caithamer and was completed when Tietje lined into Hale's hands for a double play. The Sox had another chance in the third when a single and Vosmik's error put Conlan on second with none out. He received no help.

The Indians got into scoring position for the first time in their half of the third on Knickerbocker's safe bunt which Mauldin threw wild. Tietje was able to dispose of the next three batters. In the fourth there were two on with one out, but nothing happened. Knickerbocker singled and stole second with none out in the fifth and the next three batters failed to get the ball out of the infield. Then after two were gone in the sixth Mauldin made a two base wild throw on Vosmik, who scored a moment later on Hale's single to center.

Knickerbocker Starts It.

The grief encountered by Tietje in the seventh started with Knickerbocker's single to center. Brenzel singled to right and on Winegarner's fly to center, Knickerbocker took third. He scored on a hit by Galatzer. Then Averill ruined the party by pasting his $400 homer into the right field seats, making the score, 5 to 0.

The Sox escaped from the shutout class in the seventh, although not producing a hit. With one out Swanson batted for Tietje and walked. He took third when Trosky threw wild to second on Conlan's grounder, and scored on an infield out.

LAFFOON WINS EASTERN OPEN TITLE WITH 275

Wayland, Mass., Sept. 23.—(AP)—Ky Laffoon of Denver, Col., won the eastern open golf championship today with an aggregate score of 275. He finished eight strokes ahead of Paul Runyan, the National P. G. A. titlist and winner of the event last year, who wound up with 283.

After posting rounds of 68 and 73 on Friday and Saturday, Laffoon had 65 and 69 on his rounds today. His recordbreaking 65 in the third round clipped three strokes off his own course record.

FOOTBALL FORECASTING.

NOW comes the season when football forecasters look over the various elevens, seek all the information they can secure, and hope their percentage of winners will be high enough to command respect instead of only loud guffaws.

This habit of forecasting, or this vice of forecasting, or whatever you may wish to call it, began in this column back in 1923, has continued ever since. At that time, no other newspaper, so far as we know, attempted to give the score in figures. Of course, The Wake personally did not suggest that trouble-making rôle. BUT the boss did. It was "orders." Apparently he was right so far as public interest was concerned. Now nearly every newspaper in the country picks winners. Most of them give the estimated scores.

In the 1934 forecasts, which will first appear for next Saturday's gridiron contests, it should be remembered that games are not picked with the primary idea of securing a high percentage of winners. Instead, they comprise the leading elevens of the country with each geographical section represented. Smaller colleges from the middle west are taken because in our territory. These, in the past, have proved the greatest winning percentage destroyers because of their habit of beating one another.

Perhaps nothing very serious is accomplished by football forecasts. Yet those who follow them, compare their own estimates with those appearing in this column or elsewhere, then study the actual results afterward, unquestionably acquire a familiarity with strength of elevens in all sections of the country.

The Wake forecasts are based on past performances, information from coaches, officials, other members of THE TRIBUNE sports staf, and sometimes, we must confess, are influenced by "hunches." We claim no omniscence in the matter. Results, good or bad, speak for themselves.

Here are previous records:

	W.	L.	Ties.	Ave.
1922	166	35	19	.826
1924	125	36	17	.776
1925	206	61	21	.774
1926	226	54	19	.807
1927	265	70	24	.745
1928	275	67	21	.804
1929	262	75	25	.780
1930	290	79	30	.786
1931	290	79	33	.830
1932	389	107	45	.784
1933	456	145	59	.758

In the foregoing tabulation, the average is the percentage of winning teams named with ties eliminated. Also note the progressive ratio of games considered worthy of listing, a total of 220 in 1923 and 660 in 1933.

Warneke, Cubs Face Cards in Playoff Today

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Pittsburgh, Pa., Sept. 23.—Lon Warneke is scheduled to pitch for the Cubs against the Cardinals in tomorrow's playoff of a postponed game at Wrigley field. It will be his third try for victory No. 22.

A heavy shower fell a half hour before game time, but the tarpaulin had not been taken up for practice. When the precipitation halted, the groundkeepers peeled back the canvas to reveal a dry infield. Outfielders had to get their feet wet, however.

The Felz Motors yesterday defeated the West Towns, 4 to 2, to win the Charley Grimm cup. The teams, members of the Chicago Independent Amateur Baseball league, played before 2,000 at Wrigley field.

Mills Defeat LaPorte Twice, 3 to 2 and 4 to 2

The Mills won a double-header from the Laporte, Ind., Coalers at Mills stadium yesterday, 3 to 2, in 10 innings and 4 to 2. George Gerken stole home to score the winning run with two out in the first game. McNaughton was the winning pitcher. Sullivan fanned 13 and allowed only 4 hits to win the second game.

NEW HALF BACK LEADS SING SING TO 24-0 VICTORY

Ossining, N. Y., Sept. 23.—[Special.]—The Sing Sing Black Sheep, uncovering a brilliant aerial attack, defeated the Holy Name club of Williams Bridge, 24 to 0, in the opening game of the football season at New York state's penitentiary today.

Scoring a touchdown in each quarter the convicts completely outplayed the invaders. The crowd of 2,100, of whom 500 were outsiders, was especially thrilled by the enthusiastic tackling of Lovell Landers, a former Negro college player, a newcomer to the prisoners' grid squad, who had just gained his freedom from the death house. A month ago Gov. Lehman commuted to life imprisonment his death sentence for killing a resident of Staten Island.

Sing Sing's first score came when Alabama Pitts, left half back, threw a forward pass from his thirty yard line to Quarter Back Bob Winkler. In the second quarter Winkler shot a lateral pass to Pitts, who sprinted thirty yards to the Holy Name goal.

An intercepted pass and a series of line bucks by Nelson accounted for the third quarter touchdown, and in the fourth period Left Half Back Seely intercepted a pass and ran fifty-five yards to score. All attempts for extra point failed.

MILLERS DEFEAT BIRDS, 5-2; EVEN PLAYOFF SERIES

Columbus, O., Sept. 23.—(AP)—The Minneapolis Millers evened the playoff series for the American association pennant at two-all today, defeating Columbus, 5 to 2, before more than 13,000 fans. Ernie Smith's home run with the bases loaded in the seventh inning was the deciding factor. Score:

Phillies Split Double Header with Dodgers

Brooklyn, N. Y., Sept. 23.—(AP)—The Dodgers and the Phillies split in a long double-header today, Curtis Davis receiving credit for his 18th victory of the season when a triple with two on by Eddie Boland in the 13th inning of the first game gave the Phillies a 4 to 2 triumph.

Brooklyn won the second game, called on account of darkness after six and one-half innings, 7 to 2. Home runs by Boyle and McCarthy featured a five run rally in the fifth. Scores:

20 BALLOONS OFF IN BENNETT RACE; HEAD FOR RUSSIA

Huge Crowd Views Start in Poland.

WARSAW, Sept. 23.—(AP)—Twenty big balloons soared gracefully one by one from the Mokopow airfield today in brilliant sunshine and favorable winds, starting the 22d annual Gordon Bennett cup race.

A southwesterly breeze was blowing, with indications of shifting to westward toward midnight, thus making a landing somewhere on Russian soil most probable. The balloons disappeared in the direction of Helsingfors and Leningrad.

Air currents were most advantageous at a height of around 9,000 feet, where the wind velocity was approximately 26 miles an hour. Weather forecasts indicated the velocity would increase during the evening.

Huge Crowd at Field.

Huge crowds assembled at the airfield and gasped at the brilliance of the spectacle. Huge bags of red, white, silver, and yellow shot up into the blue as ground crews released them.

A pilot balloon, operated by the Frenchman, Georges Sure, was first to ascend. Sure was accompanied by a French woman balloonist, Mme. Colette Weber.

The first competing balloon, a Polish entry, took off at 4:10 p. m. The big United States navy entrant, carrying Lieut. C. H. Kendall and H. T. Orville, soared away at 4:53 p. m.

It was followed two minutes later by the Buffalo Courier Express balloon, with George Hineman and Millford F. Vanik.

All 20 balloons were in the air by 5:40 p. m., when the French balloon, Lorraine, was released, excepting the Polish bag Torun, formerly the Polonia, which the French pilot, Georges Ravine, was to take aloft.

Balloon Runs Away.

By some error the net which supports the basket was too small for the Torun's bag, and an army lorry was rushed off to the Jablonna works, 16 miles from Warsaw, to procure the proper size net.

While the small net was being stripped off the balloon, apparently not sufficiently deflated, suddenly heaved skyward and vanished without net or basket or pilot. The runaway Torun, after several hours in the air, settled to earth undamaged near the Jablonna works, where it was constructed.

Marshal Pilsudski, the American charge d'affaires and the whole staf of the American embassy and an American naval attaché at Berlin who had come to see the navy balloon off, viewed the start of the race.

Nations competing in the race include Germany, Belgium, the United States, France, Italy, Poland, Switzerland, and Czechoslovakia.

Patrick J. Dalton Rites Set; Controler's Aid

Funeral services for Patrick J. Dalton, an employé of the county controler's office who died Saturday in Henrotin Memorial hospital, will be held at 9 a. m. Wednesday at St. Mel's church, 22 North Kildare avenue. Burial will be in Mount Carmel cemetery. Mr. Dalton was born in Limerick, Ireland, 45 years ago, and came to the United States in 1906. He had lived in Chicago since 1924.

LITTLE ORPHAN ANNIE: CAUGHT

FUNERAL TODAY FOR POLICEMAN SLAIN BY BANDIT

Funeral services for Policeman Louis Furst, 44 years old, of the Wabash avenue police station, who was slain by a Negro bandit Saturday afternoon, will be held this evening at the chapel at 316 West 63d street. His body will be sent to Carbondale, Ill. Mr. Furst is survived by his widow and three children.

THOMAS E. TORPY.

The policeman was shot and killed by James Franklin, 21 years old, 5330 Prairie avenue, when he attempted to arrest the bandit after robbery of the real estate office of H. J. Coleman, 5857 South State street. Franklin was trapped by the police in a building at 5821 Grove avenue and killed.

Funeral services for Policeman Thomas Torpy, 38 years old, of the same district, who also was killed by a Negro bandit Saturday, will be held Wednesday. He was slain by Clifton Myrick, 27 years old, 4733 St. Lawrence avenue, wanted for a number of robberies, when he attempted to arrest the suspect at his apartment. The Negro was shot and killed by Robert Galbraith, Torpy's police companion. Three companions of Myrick held by the police were identified in eight robberies at the detective bureau showup yesterday. They are John Myrick, a brother, Edward Smith, and Robert Cage.

J. E. GILL DIES; VETERAN FARM PAPER EXECUTIVE

Jeremiah Edward Gill, for many years advertising manager of Wallace's Farmer, published in Des Moines, Ia., and of the Wisconsin Agriculturist and Farmer of Racine, Wis., died last night at St. Mary's-on-the-Hill hospital in Milwaukee. He was 50 years old.

Mr. Gill suffered a heart attack six months ago, and never fully recovered his strength. He was born in Des Moines, but came to Chicago in his early years, where he became well known in the farm paper advertising field.

Mr. Gill's home was at 6445 Lakewood avenue. He is survived by the widow, Alice, a son, John, who is connected with the Chicago office of Wallace's Farmer, and a daughter, Agnes, a senior at Mundelein college. The body will be brought to Chicago today, but funeral arrangements have not been completed.

FUNERAL SERVICE THIS MORNING FOR LIEUT. DAY

Funeral services for Lieut. James F. Day, 71 years old, 5409 South Michigan boulevard, police veteran, whose body was found Thursday morning in a vacant lot next to the Gresham police station after he had been clubbed fatally and robbed, will be held today at 10:30 a. m. at St. Anne's Roman Catholic church, Wentworth avenue and Garfield boulevard. Burial will be at St. James cemetery, the Sag.

Policeman Day's son, the Rev. L. Dudley Day of St. Mary's church at Freeport, Ill., will sing the solemn requiem mass, assisted by two cousins, the Revs. Stephen E. McMahon of Chicago and John O'Hearn of Oak Park. Lieut. Day is survived by his widow and seven other children.

William Duba, 26 years old, son of an Oak Lawn truck farmer, who confessed that he had beaten the lieutenant with a club and robbed him of $18, yesterday said that he was "only showing the police a good time when he made the confession." Dr. Harry Hoffman of the Criminal court behavior clinic, who examined Duba following his confession, pronounced him a mental defective. He is being held.

WIRT F. SMITH DEAD; STRICKEN IN WASHINGTON

Wirt Foster Smith, a vice president of the B-W Construction company at 720 North Wabash avenue, died suddenly in Washington, D. C., Saturday, after an emergency operation, according to word received here yesterday. He was 53 years old.

Mr. Smith, whose home was at 7116 Euclid avenue, was the son of the late Frank J. Smith, pioneer Chicago attorney. He was a member of the class of '04 at Yale university and a graduate of Sheffield Scientific school a year later. Shortly after his graduation he was employed by the government to take charge of the survey of the disputed Alaskan boundary, and subsequently of the Panama-Colombia boundary. He served in the world war with the rank of captain.

Survivors are the widow, Clara, and three children, Marjory, Wirt Jr., and Charlotte. A sister, Mrs. Edwin W. Sims, 112 Bellevue place also survives.

LUCIEN GAUDIN, FENCER, OLYMPIC CHAMPION, DIES

PARIS, Sept. 23.—(AP)—Lucien Gaudin, whom the French regarded as the world's greatest fencer, winner of the double Olympic championship in 1928, died suddenly today from a heart attack. He was 48.

Gaudin was classified by the French federation as "beyond competition" because of his unfailing string of victories. He was left handed and equally adept with the foil or the dueling sword.

He fought one memorable duel. That was with Armand Massard, noted champion, and it grew out of personal friction over Massard's criticism of Gaudin. Massard claimed his rival didn't fight often enough. Gaudin was touched lightly on the hand after he had narrowly missed killing his opponent.

ANTHONY IVINS, PROMINENT AS MORMON, DEAD

Salt Lake City, Utah, Sept. 23.—(AP)—Anthony W. Ivins, first counselor in the first presidency of the Mormon church, died at his home here early today of a sudden heart attack.

On the occasion of his 82d birthday anniversary a week ago today, he received congratulations from many prominent persons, including President Roosevelt.

Known to Indians of the southwest, among whom he had been active for years in the interest of his church, as Tony Ivins, he remained their close friend to the end of his life.

Mr. Ivins was born in Toms River, Ocean county, N. J., Sept. 16, 1852, and was brought by his parents, Israel Ivins and Annie Lowrie Ivins, to Utah at the age of a few months.

ERWIN O. HASTEN DEAD; FATHER OF CHICAGO JUDGE

Erwin O. Hasten, father of Municipal Judge Erwin J. Hasten, died yesterday at his home at 4104 West Adams street, of heart disease. He was 78 years old and had lived for more than seventy years on the west side. Mr. Hasten retired four years ago as manager of the savings department of the Central Trust company, after more than fifty years in the banking business. Beside Judge Hasten he is survived by another son, V. Frank Hasten, and a daughter, Grace. The funeral has been tentatively set for Wednesday morning at St. Mel's Catholic church.

Prof. Cramer, Relative of Grant, to Be Buried Today

Providence, R. I., Sept. 23.—(AP)—Funeral services for Prof. Jesse Grant Cramer, widely known language teacher, will be conducted tomorrow morning in Forest Hills chapel, Boston. Member of a distinguished family, he was born in Covington, Ky., in 1869, the son of the late Dr. M. J. Cramer of East Orange, N. J., United States minister for many years to Denmark, Germany, and Switzerland, and the late Mary Frances Grant Cramer, youngest sister of the late Gen. U. S. Grant. His universities were New York, Columbia and Liepzig.

News of the Radio Stations

BY LARRY WOLTERS.

If you want to buy a duck rush right out to the nearest poultry dealers and buy it. Joe Penner's is no longer for sale. After offering it from the stage of every theater in the land and over the air, Joe has decided to keep the webfoot. He formed such an attachment for the quacking fowl while filming "College Rhythm" this summer that he will not part with it, he revealed yesterday. Thus when he comes back on the air in two weeks his famous tag line will be missing.

Penner and his wife, the former Eleanor Vogt of St. Louis, are spending a couple of days at the Fair before going east. Mrs. Penner and Jeanie Lang formerly appeared together on the stage.

Reminiscing about his start in radio yesterday, Penner disclosed that he first went on the air four years ago with Dick Powell, the movie star, then a master of ceremonies in Pittsburgh. He didn't like the experience and was not enthusiastic about trying again a couple of years later with Rudy Vallee. When Joe clicked he was overcome.

He is still a modest chap despite his swift rise to stardom. When he played in the Greenwich Village Follies a critic wrote: "Joe Penner, who has just come up from burlesque, will soon be back there." Penner has never forgotten that.

Buddy Rogers hopped a train for Olathe, Kas., his home town, after his CBS broadcast with Jeanie Lang last night. Buddy plans to ring a few doorbells, perhaps even make a speech for his father, who is running for probate judge of the district. Rogers Sr., well known in Kansas publishing circles, was instrumental in getting his son the screen test that landed him in Hollywood. And Buddy hopes that his efforts may help to land his father on the bench. Buddy will leave the College inn Sept. 29 for Philadelphia. Maurie Sherman will fill in until Oct. 3, when George Olson and Ethel Shutta open there.

Those raids on the Show Boat cast are continuing. A few weeks ago Annette Hanshaw resigned to join a cigaret show on CBS. Now Capt. Henry, that is Charles Winninger, is leaving. He's cast in a new Broadway revue called "Revenge with Music." Otis Skinner turned down a chance to be his successor. Others being considered are Herb Rawlinson, Gilbert Emery, and Frank Moulan.

Will Rogers, Col. Stoopnagle, and Budd, and an orchestra directed by Oscar Bradley will open a new series over CBS at 8:30 p. m. Sunday, Oct. 7. There's no local outlet. Try WABC, New York, or CKLW, Detroit.

A new dramatic show titled "Wings of Dawn" will go on the air over WBBM-CBS at 1:15 o'clock today. Cornelia Osgood, who plays a leading rôle in W-G-N's "Helen Trent," is to be the star of this show. Others in the cast: Harriet Widmer, Frank Dane, Edith Davis, Vincent Coleman, Elmore Gailey, and Dorothy Mead.

R. R. Anderson Funeral Set; Veteran of Lakes

Funeral services for Robert R. Anderson, 751 Division street, Oak Park, will be held at 2:30 p. m. Tuesday from the Postelwaite chapel, 720 Lake street, Oak Park. Mr. Anderson, 73 years old, was a lake captain for 20 years, coming to Chicago in 1895 to become head of the Robert R. Anderson company, contractors, until his retirement in 1925. He is survived by the widow, Florence; two sons, Herbert R. and Ralph R., and a daughter, Mrs. Grace Engelhardt, all of Oak Park.

TIME TO TAKE STOCK OF NRA, SAYS INDUSTRY

Questionnaire Asks People's Views.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Sept. 23.—Asserting that "the time has come to take stock of the many experiments of the last two years and to decide which of them shall be continued, modified, or abandoned," the National Association of Manufacturers today issued a set of twelve questions to be propounded by the electorate to candidates for congress.

C. L. BARDO.

The Seventy-fourth congress, to be elected in November, is to decide, says the association, "whether we are to plunge further into state capitalism or to begin now to work our way back to firmer foundations."

Contrasting its course with that of the American Federation of Labor, the association states that its questionnaire is designed for mass distribution to the electorate without thought of the association demanding answers directly from candidates.

Is Educational Effort.

"The effort primarily is educational to the voter," C. L. Bardo, president of the association, pointed out in an accompanying letter. "It is not a central demand upon all candidates to give a strict accounting to one group by telling how they will vote if elected. This sort of domination by maneuvered minorities is un-American and unwholesome in a democracy. Worthwhile officials will seek to represent all the people.

"Industrialists are so concerned over the future of business recovery as related to government that they are of necessity taking a greater interest than ever before in the viewpoints of those who seek to legislate upon matters affecting the livelihood of every person in the country. Therefore the National Association of Manufacturers is suggesting the twelve questions for submission to candidates as a means of assisting the electorate to a better understanding of how deeply their future welfare, dependent upon a prosperous industry, is involved in voting.

Twelve Questions Asked.

The twelve questions follow:

1. Do you believe congress should resume its full legislative and deliberative powers?

2. Do you favor reducing government control of the management of private business?

3. Will you work and vote for an early return to balanced governmental budgets?

4. Do you believe that employés should be free to join a legitimate labor organization of any sort without coercion from any source?

5. Should an individual be free to sell his own labor individually or collectively, as he and his employer may agree to their mutual satisfaction?

6. Do you believe where collective bargaining exists there should be corresponding collective responsibility for its exercise?

7. Do you believe in maintaining the constitutional division of power between the federal and state governments?

About Contract Letting.

8. Do you favor awarding governmental contracts to the lowest responsible bidder, in accordance with law, instead of using contracts to compel acceptance by bidders of governmental policies not specifically provided by law?

9. Do you believe that the powers of taxation should be used solely for securing revenue for the legitimate functions of government?

10. Do you favor government competition with private business?

11. Do you believe that government operations should be placed on a comparative accounting basis, particularly where the government competes with private business?

12. Do you believe in creating by law, through such measures as compulsory unemployment insurance, old age pensions, etc., a private right to publicly controled funds, thus reducing the efforts of individuals to provide for themselves and increasing their willingness to rely on the government for support, thereby aggravating the very evils which such legislation is intended to relieve?

Engineering Awards Run Above Recent Averages

The Engineering News-Record reports that engineering awards last week will amount to about $27,945,000, an increase of 18 per cent over the previous four week average. Of this total, it was said, public works will account for about $20,866,000.

THE UNIVERSITY OF CHICAGO

Central Bank Branded Blow to Enterprise

Establishment of a governmentally controled central bank would result in the eventual disappearance of the system of free enterprise under which the United States has developed, the Guaranty Trust company of New York warned yesterday in its current monthly review. The most ominous possibilities of such a proposal lie not in the extension of control over the banking business but in altering the nature of the banking process in such a way as to place the entire economic life of the country under the regulation of public officials, the survey asserted.

While admitting that reforms and a certain amount of control are necessary, the bank declares the plan would put the entire banking structure into politics to an extent never before contemplated in the United States.

Fears Extension of Control.

"Such a policy would not be confined to the banking system itself," the review declared. "Banking is the nerve center of business. Government control of the supply of credit would sooner or later involve efforts at governmental control of prices, production and business policies in general. The entire industrial and commercial structure would be affected. Private property in productive goods would be placed in jeopardy. It is doubtful whether proponents of the plan realize how strong it would tend to create a drift toward socialism."

Declaring the government has already extended its control over banking very drastically, partly as the result of a temporary emergency, the bank says it now should withdraw the control as quickly as possible, in so far as it tends to make banking operations subject to political influences.

DENY DISCUSSION HERE.

Eighteen leading bankers of the country, members of the technical committee of the Reserve City Bankers' association, gathered here in the Blackstone hotel yesterday and, contrary to reports, denied that they had discussed the growing movement in political circles for a governmentally owned central bank. The subject was not mentioned, except in casual conversation between individuals, according to Lyman E. Wakefield, head of the association and president of the First National Bank and Trust company of Minneapolis.

"This meeting is purely a routine affair, one of four or five held yearly," Wakefield said. "It was decided upon in July when the association last met in Chicago, and was not called for any purpose other than technical affairs."

"Talk now of a government owned bank is premature, for no one knows just what this covers nor how far any legislation which might be enacted would go," Wakefield asserted. "Our interest lies entirely with those who deal with banks and our future depends on our ability to serve the public adequately. It must be remembered that no law governing banking transactions can be made which does not affect those dealing with banks.

"Banks can always adjust themselves to statutory requirements, but these inevitably affect individuals who deal with them. No taxation nor other expenditure can be imposed unless means can be found to collect these increased costs from customers."

The American Bankers' association is expected to take a decided stand against the proposals at its convention in Washington, D. C., next month, while bankers throughout the country are said to be near open revolt, supported generally by business men.

PWA Says Job Plan Creates $414,000,000 of Orders

Washington, D. C., Sept. 23.—(AP)—The Public Works administration said today its job creating program in the first year sent orders for $414,000,000 worth of materials to factories. These orders, PWA said, enabled manufacturing establishments to give the equivalent of a month's work for 1,100,000 men.

GRAINS RESIST SELLING WAVES; CLOSE IS STRONG

Foreign News Chief in Week's Trade.

BY THOMAS FURLONG.

Grain prices in the Chicago market showed a strong undertone throughout the trading last week. Although several selling flurries caused temporary recessions, when the week closed quotations for the most part showed slight increases over the final prices of the preceding week.

It was foreign news, rather than domestic conditions, which provided the basis for the day to day price swings. The unsettlement in the foreign markets growing out of the offerings of Argentine wheat in Europe was reflected temporarily in prices here, but before the week closed the losses were made up.

The most notable feature of the week was the small volume of trading. Although the market on several occasions showed its underlying strength traders were not inclined to make commitments except from day to day.

Speculation at Low Ebb.

The low ebb of speculative operations was clearly shown in the price relationship between the various wheat futures. All futures were selling on the same basis when the week closed. Normally the more distant future should sell at a price which includes the cost of carrying the grain until the date of delivery. Instead, the May wheat future closed at the same figure as the September and December deliveries which actually represents a discount when the carrying charge is considered.

The week was also marked by the customary scares over the possibility of importations of foreign wheat. The weakness in Argentine prices led to speculation over the chances of importations from that country. The effect of such discussion was temporarily depressing on the market. Investigation appeared to show, however, that the prospect of such transactions is remote.

Week's Range of Prices.

The following table shows the range of prices on various grain futures for the week:

Spain's 1934 Wheat Crop Above Annual Consumption

VALLADOLID, Spain, Sept. 23.—(AP)—Spain's 1934 wheat production was estimated today at approximately 16,600,000 bushels in figures published in the Castilian Miller. This is about 2,383,000 bushels above the country's annual consumption. Practically all Spanish producing centers reported bumper crops.

That Federal Cheese Stock May Be Useful

The government's attempt to relieve the Swiss cheese surplus by buying 2,805,000 pounds for $600,000, which will be distributed to the needy, prompts a reader to ask whether crackers and beer are to be given with it. Some believe it may be fed to brain trust employés, because of its qualities as a brain food. A more conservative use is suggested by a reader who urges the treasury use it as a reserve against currency, which would then be backed by gold, silver, cheese, and bologna.

A shipment of 120 extremely heavy hogs sold here recently cost the packer a total of $5,466, but returned to the farmer, Carl Ward of Hull, Ill., only $4,142. The difference, $1,324, was paid in tax to the federal government. The hogs weighed 58,830 pounds, averaging 490 pounds per head. The tax alone on these hogs, at the rate of $2.25 per cwt., amounted to $11.03 per head.

Selling a 52 million dollar railroad property is no easy task. Ask Howard S. Abbott, United States court commissioner at Minneapolis. He recently spent two hours reading aloud the order of sale when he attempted to auction off the Minneapolis and St. Louis railroad. When he finished he found there were no holders, so he faces the same ritual again on Nov. 12.

The government's nice new booklet telling people how they can get in debt by fixing up their homes suggests how nice it would be to build cupboards in the kitchen and bookshelves in the living room. Thus far no fervent amens have been heard from kitchen cabinet and bookcase manufacturers, comments the Chicago Market Daily.

Widespread settling of houses and buildings in Iowa this year, many of which have stood for years, is due to the drouth. Soil in places has become fine powder, blowing away and weakening foundations. No severe shifting of the structures has been reported; at least none strong enough to throw one away from the dinner table.

Gold fish enthusiasts certainly mean that their pets shall get the very best of everything! The latest gadget for these tiny denizens of artificial deeps is an electric air conditioner for home aquariums which furnishes a constant supply of fresh, washed air and keeps the water at the correct temperature.

CORN-HOG FARMERS GET $86,220,880 U. S. BONUSES THIS YEAR

Washington, D. C., Sept. 23.—(AP)—A total of 918,962 corn-hog farmers in 39 states have received $86,220,880 of government bonuses this year. The farm administration in announcing this figure, declared that it represented about 66 per cent of the $133,000,000 first payment total now due.

Speeding of the rate of approving contracts was also announced by Dr. A. G. Black, chief of the corn-hog section. More than 75 per cent of the 1,200,000 contracts signed by farmers have been received and released for payment.

Total payments to date to producers in middle western states were: Illinois, $4,007,297; Indiana, $7,713,894; Iowa, $22,753,704; Kansas, $5,140,920; Michigan, $158,531; Minnesota, $5,595,710; Missouri, $8,497,212; Nebraska, $8,401,294; Ohio, $6,962,520; Wisconsin, $2,492,308.

Dodge Retail Passenger Car Sales Rise in Week

Retail sales of Dodge passenger cars during the week ended Sept. 15 totaled 1,248 units, compared with 958 in the previous week, the company announces. This brought the sales for the first 37 weeks of the year up to 72,539, compared with 62,555 in the same period last year.

U. S. Agents' Loans Jump 100 Million

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Sept. 23.—An increase in loans of approximately $100,000,000 from June 30 to July 31 in corporations and agencies wholly financed by the government or jointly by governmental and private funds was shown in a statement of the assets and liabilities made public today by the treasury department.

The total loans by the government corporations on July 31 were $3,173,973,245, and by the others $3,470,460,291, or a grand total of $6,644,438,536, as compared with $6,544,000,000 on June 30.

The principal increase was $169,000,000 in loans by the Home Owners' Loan corporation, which carried the total for that agency to $1,003,295,359. On the other hand, Reconstruction Finance corporation loans (these including disbursements for the purchase of preferred stock and capital notes of banks) at $2,543,000,000 showed a shrinkage through repayments of $124,000,000.

Investment by the corporations and agencies in government securities over the month showed relatively little change, easing from $361,000,000 on June 30 to $358,204,599 on July 31.

Steel Plants Lift Output; Orders Rise

The rate of operations in the steel industry last week gained 2 points to 22½ per cent of production capacity, the magazine Steel said yesterday. The rise was brought about by a slight improvement in orders from miscellaneous manufacturers and by larger structural awards. The moderate improvement is looked upon as indicating widespread depletion of stocks and a slight seasonal expansion in some industries.

The outlook for prices was more clouded last week and consumers continue to withhold commitments apparently until the picture clears. Iron and steel prices advanced $3 to $8 a ton in the second quarter, but before they became effective there were reductions in July that narrowed the increase to $2 to $4 a ton. There has been no broad buying movement to test prices for several months.

Cancel Price Reductions.

Last week a Cleveland producer sent a reduction of $2.25 a ton on pig iron to the industry's code authority, while in Detroit a producer filed a $5 cut on cold-rolled strip, but both were withdrawn before taking effect. Prices of semi-finished steel at Pittsburgh are reported as insecure, while nuts and bolts are down approximately 20 per cent.

The automobile industry is placing large orders for fill-in requirements on present models, while specifications for new models are slow in coming out. The Ford Motor company is to curtail steel production soon, having built up stocks estimated at 125,000 tons. Output of cars last week at 38,000 was 5,000 under the preceding week.

Structural shape awards at 20,028 tons for the week were nearly three times as large as in the preceding week, while inquiries are expected soon for 45,000 tons of structural material for new bridges.

Changes Shown by Districts.

Among the gains in operation last week was a rise of 3 points to 16 per cent at Pittsburgh, 3 to 26 at Wheeling, 10 to 28 at Cleveland, 3 to 21 at Buffalo, 2 to 25 at Birmingham, 2 to 26 at Youngstown, 3 to 28 in New England, and 1 to 17 in eastern Pennsylvania. Chicago was down 2 points to 22 per cent, while Detroit held at 77. It is estimated in trade quarters that the Youngstown rate will hold at 26 per cent this week.

The magazine's iron and steel composite is down 1 cent to $32.13 a ton. The finished steel index is unchanged at $54 a ton, while the iron and steel scrap figure has eased 4 cents to $9.33.

Gold Dredging Company Reports Higher Earnings

August net earnings of Natomas, California Gold Dredging and Land company, totaled $82,592, equivalent to 8 1-3 cents a share on the outstanding capital stock, compared with $73,300, or 7 1-3 cents a share in July.

STOCK TRADERS RECOVER HOPE AND PRICES RISE

Week's Gain Largest Since August.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Sept. 23.—After two weeks of heavy mulling over the seamy side of life the Wall street speculative community suddenly came to the conclusion last Tuesday afternoon that all was not lost despite appearances and turned once more to the so-called constructive side of the share market.

What appeared to be the start of a belated trek out of the dark woods got under way Tuesday, and the march, slow and laborious though it was, was kept up doggedly through the week. Before the turn was called, however, the low for the reaction was established on Monday.

Bond Rise Is Helpful.

At the same time the speculative spirit was jacked up by some rejuvenation of the government bond market, possibly on treasury support and on some reassurance over the outlook for currency stabilization and a better treasury condition. Shares registered the widest weekly gains since Aug. 25, but it was accomplished on a scanty turnover of 3,223,050 shares.

From the standpoint of turnover, the familiar apathy continued, but of the stock market it is possible to say that its stationary attitude—the averages now stand about where they were at the end of August—is negatively favorable. The month of September in eight of the last dozen years has brought a price decline, and in few of those years has the pall of despondency been laid on so heavily as at present.

Gloom Is Still Thick.

There is still a thick layer of gloom pressing down on the speculative body, but now for the first time in weeks it is mixed with a little cheer, generated by improvement in business.

Indications are coming to hand that trade is improving. While the upturn is confined largely to retail and wholesale channels, and may be somewhat less than seasonal, the good reports are having no less heartening effect on those who had begun to limit their outlook to nothing but further decline from the summer's low levels. To explain the recovery there are such natural and unnatural developments as the opening of schools, the cooler weather, rains in the farm belt, and a belated windfall of government crop and bonus checks.

MIDDLE WEST'S PLANS BEFORE COURT TODAY

Creditors to Make Their Reorganization Offer.

Creditors of the Middle West Utilities company this morning will tell Federal Judge James H. Wilkerson just why they think the billion dollar Insull holding concern is so insolvent that it is not worth the 62 millions it owes them.

The bankers and noteholders have declined to make public the details of their reasoning before presenting them in court as part of a proposed plan for reorganizing the company. It is known, however, that they will seek to have valuations based on the worth of Middle West holdings—securities of subsidiaries.

Confidence of the creditors in their case is revealed by their deafness to requests of common stock holders for a share in the new company as the price of their consent to a plan.

Common Holders Confident.

Orville J. Taylor, attorney for the common stock committee, is equally confident, however, that he can beat their case. If he does, creditors must obtain consent of 51 per cent of each class of stockholders or else take their chances on liquidation. Insolvency is the only way to eliminate the need for stockholder approval of a reorganization plan.

Judge Wilkerson indicated that he will be quite willing to consider other bases of valuation than that to be urged by bankers and noteholders, who contend the fallen concern is worth only about 18 millions. Last Thursday he asked for an opinion of creditor counsel on the validity of rate making values. He made no comment on a denial of their usefulness in the case.

Will Decide on Trustee.

One point which will be decided today is whether the immediate appointment of a permanent trustee or trustees is vital, or whether it is a matter which can await disposition of the insolvency arguments.

All parties appear agreed on the qualifications of Daniel C. Green, now temporary trustee. Mr. Green was brought in to become president of Middle West by Charles A. McCulloch, receiver up to the time of Mr. Green's trusteeship. Selection of another trustee will be asked by Mr. Taylor as part of the common stock fight on the creditor program.

MEXICO'S RAIL CHIEF REPORTS TRAFIC UP 30%

Railroad trafic in Mexico, both freight and passenger, has increased approximately 30 per cent this year, as compared to last, Mariano Cabrera, president of the National Railway of Mexico, declared here last night. Business in general, he said, is vastly improved in his country.

Mr. Cabrera, his wife, their son, Mariano Jr., 7 years old; a nephew, Camile Falton, 14, and a niece, Aurora Cabrera, 9, arrived at the Illinois Central railroad depot from St. Louis. The party plans to spend a week or ten days visiting A Century of Progress Exposition and will stay at the Drake hotel.

A delegation of railroad executives, including Louis S. Hungerford, vice president of the Pullman company; G. S. Truesdale, general passenger agent of the Illinois Central; J. V. Lanigan, passenger trafic manager, and T. E. Harris, manager of foreign freight trafic for the I. C., met Mr. Cabrera.

LETTERS

Letters addressed to the Financial Editor, of not more than 200 words, will be printed in these columns from time to time.

A Difference of 14 Per Cent.

Oak Park, Ill., Sept. 15.—You recently printed an article headed "August HOLC Loans in the City $17,000,000." Further down in this story, quoting Mr. Zander, he states that "an average loan of 66 per cent of the value of the security" has been the basis for the loans and therefore the bonds are amply secured.

Isn't it the letter of the law that the loan shall be 80 per cent of the appraised value of the property rather than 66 per cent?

I feel appraisals of the HOLC resulted in unreasonable losses to mortgage holders who accepted their bonds in settlement of distress loans. If the basis for making the loan is 66 per cent of the value instead of 80 per cent as the law provides, it would look as if losses to mortgage holders were increased by the definite policy of loaning on a lower percentage of value than the amount set out in the law.

How does the HOLC explain this difference between 66 and 80 per cent?

F. B. PEAKE.

President, Suburban Trust and Savings Bank.

A New Deal?

Decatur, Ill., Sept. 19.—Theories of price fixing, wage fixing, control of distribution and production of both agriculture and all its forms of directed industry under the code system of governmental bureaus cause us to wonder if the heads of bureaus in Washington, D. C., are students of governmental economy.

More than 1,600 years ago Emperor Diocletian, with the same power as that possessed by the President of the United States, fixed prices, wages, and distribution of agriculture and industry in all its relations to the people. With all his powers of the then world empire he forced his conception of the proper relation to prices, wages, and production by prescribing the death penalty for violation of his scale and code. Historical records show that after a short period of trial the scheme was abandoned because it ruined the empire.

We find all through history that wherever such a governmental structure was set up in any form the effect thereof was a miserable failure.

The purpose of all the useless and extravagant expenditure of taxpayers' money is nothing more nor less than buying votes for the coming election. What indictment are we justified in placing against leaders in the Democratic party if not that of perjury and treason? Can a liberty loving people say the oath taken by them to uphold and support the constitution of the United States has been kept inviolate?

H. C. LUALLEN.

PRICES OF BONDS RALLY BRISKLY LATE IN WEEK

Rail Issues Gain Most on Freight Rise.

New York, Sept. 23.—(AP)—After a poor start, corporate bonds rallied briskly during the latter part of last week and U. S. government securities held their own in a market rather nervous at times.

Corporation issues, which have been lagging during the last few weeks, apparently took a more hopeful view of the business situation as well as political and other economic signs.

The rails scored the best advances of the week as freight car loadings showed a more than seasonal increase and predictions of still better trafic returns were made by some carrier officials.

See Redemption Move.

That companies with large cash balances may determine to redeem some of their bonds instead of waiting to pay them off on due dates was seen in the announcement of the Chrysler corporation that it was calling on Nov. 1 $10,000,000 of the Dodge Brothers debenture 6s of 1940 at 105 and interest.

The federal list recovered sharply on Thursday, with gains ranging from 7-32ds of a point to more than a point. Just how much support the treasury may have accorded its bonds as a spur to its refunding program was a matter of conjecture. Home Owners and federal mortgage issues developed the most pronounced strength on the upturn. There were some later reactions under profit taking.

Close Books Today on U. S. Notes.

That the treasury is confident of success in the conversion of the $1,250,000,000 of called Liberty 4th 4¼s was believed indicated by the announcement of Secretary Morgenthau that the books on the exchange of the bonds for the 2½ per cent notes would be closed tomorrow. The offering of the 3¼ per cent bonds for the called Liberties will be continued until further notice.

The strength of South American obligations was the feature of the foreign department.

SPECIALTY SALESMEN
BECOME RACINE MERCHANDISE SPECIALISTS.
Quick and Sure Profitable Selling.

We are a well established, growing manufacturing concern, and scour the market for the finest materials and most outstanding patterns produced in America and choice importations. Many of our values are sensational. Our salesmen are practically in a business for themselves. 95% of our business is repeat orders. Many contacts repeat 100%, monthly. Earnings of good new salesmen are regularly $5.00, $10.00, $12.00, $15.00, or more a day. Daily profits are absolutely certain.

We use specialty methods and you can employ as much ability in selling our necktwear deal as by using good will of old days in selling cash registers, adding machines, or the highest grade specialty. Our men are furnished a $5.00 sample case and $150.00 to $250.00 worth of merchandise. They go out equipped and operate like $5,000 to $10,000 per year men. They are not asked to invest money in merchandise or equipment until they have made over $50.00 per week in commissions for a period of time. We furnish customers the "Science of Color in Dress" in 52 colors—the most authentic, attractive and complete ever utilized.

Some of our best salesmen are young men, others are well in the 50s. There is practically no turnover in our organization. Applicants must be workers and producers, must have permanent addresses, good contacts and gilt edge references, seeking a permanent connection. Get started immediately. Our good men expect to make $1,000 to $3,000 each in December alone. Our limit in the entire Chicago territory is 40 salesmen. Canvassers and peddlers, please do not apply. Call Room 300, 154 E. Erie-st.

Lindbergh Flies East to Testify—First Pictures of Man from Whom Hauptmann Said He Got Ransom Money

[Associated Press Photos.]

SIMILAR WORDS UNDER THE MICROSCOPE

Bruno Hauptmann's writing:

22 St. past
was April 17
I will you the baby send
As soon as
and money

Handwriting of the kidnaper:

23 st last April
redy anyone
I will you the baby baby baby

This is the actual script, enlarged, of words appearing on Hauptmann's automobile license and in a letter he wrote to Mrs. Annette Begg. Second from the top is the word "past," which may be compared with the word "last," which appears in the extract from the ransom note.

This is the actual script, enlarged, of words which appear in the ransom note to Col. Lindbergh, which notes were written by the person who penned the first note left in the baby's crib. The word "redy" may be compared with Hauptmann's "red" in his automobile license. The "one" and the last three letters in "anyone" may be compared with the "one" in the license.

AUTUMN ARRIVES, BRINGING FINE, SUNNY DAY FOR RAKERS OF LAWNS. Charles Schopper, 1654 Farwell avenue, like many other Chicago householders, celebrated the end of summer yesterday by getting rid of a crop of leaves. The dry season just concluded has hastened their falling.
